Aguilera Reported to be in Jamaica—Rebel Depredations—Execution of Gen. Quesada and Figueredo—Habeas Corpus.

HAVANA, Aug. 10.—It is reported that FRANCISCO AGUILERA, the ex-Cuban Minister of War, has arrived in Jamaica. The Voz de Cuba says the forces of the insurgent Gen. YUCLAN are between Gibara and Holguin, committing many depredations. When the steamer left the rebels were situated in the town of Auras, midway on the road uniting Gibara and Holguin. The insurgent Gens. QUESADA and FIGUEREDO have been executed at Santiago de Cuba. Fears are entertained for the safety of the steamer Iqueno, from Cadiz, now a week overdue at this port. Many unconfirmed rumors are in circulation regarding Porto Rico. Owing to the numerous robberies committed in and about this city during the past few weeks, the Police last night arrested over forty suspicious characters, principally negroes. This morning three negroes attacked a house in Lampsville-street.

THE LABOR REFORMERS.

A Political Platform Laid Down—Principles On Which They Propose to Go Before the Country Next Year.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 10.—The declaration of principles with which the National Labor Party propose to go before the country next year as a political organization is as follows:

Referring to the call for a National Convention to nominate a President and a Vice-President, they say: In making this call and presuming to enter into competition with existing parties, it is meet we should give to the world our reasons as well as the remedies we propose for the wrongs of which we complain. Starting, then, with the maxim that the Government is the creature of sovereignty and the source of the governed, and its purpose is to protect property and enforce national rights, and thus give to all an equitable chance in the race of life, the land, water, air, and all natural elements, are common gifts; governments are only trustees to guard against their monopolization; and the moment they have no right to alienate them without the consent of the owner, freely given. That all class legislation whereby these original and common elements, or the proceeds of the same, enhanced by intelligent labor, are perverted from their original design, and made to insure to the benefit of a privileged few, and to the injury of producers, is wrong and subversive of the purpose of good government, that all able bodied intelligent persons should contribute to the common stock by fruitful industry, a sum or quantity equal to their own support; and legislation should tend so far as possible to the equitable distribution of the surplus products. If these propositions are true, our Government is wholly perverted from its true design, and the sacred names of democracy and republicanism are synonyms of despotism, and the parties represented thereby, as now organized, are engines of oppression, striking out the lives of the people, to be used only for support of the few. That in this beneficent country of unlimited resources, with the land annually greening beneath the products of human effort, the mass of the people have no supply beyond their daily wants, and are compelled, from unjust conditions, to sickness and misfortune, to become paupers and tramps. Pauperism and crime are the prevailing questions of all modern statesmanship, and it is with these we have to deal. How far these evils are connected with the abuses inflicted on labor, a superficial statesmanship seems not to perceive. Chattel slavery has been abolished, but the habits and relations of labor and justice that they did before emancipation, in respect to the division of its products. The difference lies only in the methods of abstracting the results, and concentrating them in the few capitalists, now the masters and dictators of terms; and thus labor is practically placed in the same condition of the slave before his emancipation. In thus placing it, the interest of all labor becomes common, and they must fight the battle in unity if they would succeed. What, then, are the instrumentalities by which these wrongs are inflicted?

First—Banking and moneyed monopolies by which those who create wealth rent interest, the productions of human labor are concentrated in the hands of few producers. This is the great central source of these wrongs, and through which all other monopolies exist and operate.

Second—Consolidated railroad and other transit monopolies whereby all industries are taxed to the last mill they will bear for the benefit of stockholders and stock jobbers.

Third—Manufacturing monopolies, whereby small operators are crushed and the price of labor and its products are determined with mathematical certainty in the interests of capitalists.

Fourth—Land monopolies by which public domain is absorbed by a few speculators.

Fifth—Commercial and grain monopolies, speculating and cornering their blasted corporations on human necessities.

We propose to restore the Government to its original purpose, and as far as possible to remedy these evils and remove their results:

First—By establishing a monetary system based on the facts and resources of the nation, in harmony with the genius of the Government and adapted to the exigencies of legitimate commerce. To this end the circulating notes of the national and State banks, as well as all currency that is not a full legal tender, should be withdrawn from circulation and a proper currency issued by the Government which shall be legal tender in the payment of all debts, public and private, dues on imports included, and declared the lawful money of the United States. This currency or money to be interchangeable at the pleasure of the holders or Government bonds drawing interest, and the power of the Government creditors to have the privilege of taking the money or the bonds at their election, reserving to Congress the right to regulate the rate of interest on the bonds, and the power to issue legal tender, so as to effect the equitable distribution of the products of labor between money or non-producing capital and productive industry.

Second—By paying the national debt in strict accordance with the laws under which it was originally contracted—gold where specifically promised; but all other bonds and debts of every kind, including the principal of the five-twenty bonds, shall be discharged at the earliest option of the Government, in the legal-tender currency or lawful money of the United States, without funding it in long bonds, or in any way increasing the gold-paying and untaxed obligations of the Government.

Third—By preserving inviolate the public domain to actual settlers, tillers of the soil.

Fourth—By a tariff of revenue alone, believing as we do that the reduction of interest to adjust the labor will do more to increase rewards of labor, and to encourage the development of agriculture, mineral, manufacturing and commercial resources, than any system of tariff laws that can be devised.

Fifth—By restraining, or if needs be abolishing, corporate power, to the end that interlocking class legislation, and confidential relations to the Government subjecting the military to the civil authority, and reducing the army to a peace standard, and confining its operations to national purposes alone.

Sixth—By insisting that in all future wars the means necessary for their prosecution shall, as required, be collected from the wealth of the country, and not entailed on the future earnings of labor.

Seventh—By adopting an Indian policy founded on national justice, by which many valuable lives and many millions of money will be annually saved.

Eighth—By holding legislators to a more rigid accountability, by requiring the submission of the organization of territory and other fundamental laws affecting the general interest of society to a vote of the whole people.

Ninth—By prohibiting the importation of coolies, or other servile labor, and protecting labor from all unnecessary burdens.

Tenth—By encouraging co-operative efforts and the building up of manufacturing industries throughout the country.

Eleventh—By granting general amnesty and restoring the Union at once on the basis of the equality of rights and privileges to all classes and persons; the immortal, eternal principle of justice being the only true bond of union to bind the States together and engage the affections of the people of the Government.

Twelfth—By the creation of a Board of Management of the currency and revenue, to consist of such intelligent business men as may be necessary, to supervise the fiscal affairs of the Government, which Board shall be charged with the execution of all laws relating to the collection of and disbursements of the revenue and the regulation of the currency, and empowered to employ and have the oversight of the clerical force and other officers and agents required in the discharge of all the duties pertaining to this Department, the same rule to be applied to the Post-office and Interior Departments as far as may be practicable, the Secretaries of the Departments to be Presidents of such Boards.

MILITARY PENSIONS.

Interesting Data Relative to the Pensioners of 1812—Comparative and Speculative Estimates—The Probable Annual Expense.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Considerable speculation having existed in reference to the question of how many survivors of the 1812 war are entitled to pensions under the Act of Feb. 14, 1871, the following data, compiled from the official records of the War Department, will be read with interest. During the War of 1812-14 the following number of enlistments occurred:

Soldiers of the regular army who served twelve months	38,186
Sailors and marines in the navy who served twelve months	17,042
Militia men who served twelve months	7,147
Militia men who served six months and less than twelve months	69,225
Militia men who served three months and less than six months	125,643
Militia men who served one month and less than three months	128,307
Militia men who served less than one month	147,300
Total enlistments	527,694

There were, therefore, 358,147 who served three months and longer, to which number should be added one-third of those who served one month and less than three months, amounting to 41,769, a total of 396,916 sixty days' men, in whose ranks those claiming pensions under the act of Feb. 14, 1871, must have served. It was estimated by the Pension officer, and reported to a committee of Congress in 1858-59, that 180,619 soldiers of the War of 1812, of all terms of service, survived at that date; and again, in 1866-67, that (including widows,) 90,655 were then alive. The latter report also referred to the estimated number of Revolutionary soldiers who would be entitled to the benefit of the provisions of the act of 1820, at the time it was pending before Congress, and to the actual number of pensions admitted under it, which not only sustained the calculation, but indicated that it might be underrated. The duration of the War of the Revolution was more than double that of 1812, and the number enlisting more than once would, no doubt, be proportionately increased. One of the acts for Revolutionary pensions required nine months' service, and the applicant to be in indigent circumstances, and the other required six months' service, without any other restriction. Of the 219,611 enlistments in that war, 58,110 received pensions, or one to every five soldiers without including widows. The same rule applied to soldiers of the war of 1812. Allowing a period to expire equal to that which intervened between the termination of the Revolutionary war and the date of the estimate, viz.: forty-one years, gives 59,388 as entitled to pensions in 1865. The service required by the act of Feb. 14, 1871, being but sixty days, the number would be materially augmented. From similar data it is estimated by the Pension Office that in 1865, 31,190 widows of the soldiers of the war of 1812 were then alive, making a total of 33,579 entitled to pensions. So far as the examination of these claims has progressed the average age of the claimants is found to be seventy-nine years. If 33,579 widows and survivors were entitled to pensions in 1865, as this time, according to the Carlisle tables, 44,893 would be embraced within the provisions of the act of Feb. 14, 1871. It may be stated that of the total estimates given (527,694) many were second and third enlistments of the same soldier, which would materially reduce the number representing the soldiers actually in service. Allowing ten per cent. of this class, there would still be 40,133 persons now entitled to pensions under the act of Feb. 14, 1871, which, at the uniform rate of $8 per month, would amount to $3,933,768 per annum.

The following circular has been issued by the Commissioner of Pensions:

In lieu of previous instructions from this office, dated July, 1871, for the information of applicants for pensions under the act of Feb. 14, 1871, you are informed in view of the express requirements of the act of Feb. 14, 1871, granting pensions to the survivors of the war of 1812, proof of loyalty will in all cases be carefully examined and the law strictly construed. When witnesses testify to the loyalty of a claimant their character must be established by the certificate of an officer of the United States Court, United States Commissioner, Assessor, Assistant Assessor, Collector, Deputy Collector, Supervisor of Internal Revenue, or a Postmaster, showing to the satisfaction of this office that, after careful investigation, he is convinced the above witnesses are men of undoubted good character for truth and veracity, and that their statements in this case which is referred to are worthy of full faith and credit.

Total number of applications for pensions for service in the war of 1812, up to date, is 30,540.

YACHTING.

Eastward Run of the New-York Squadron—Foul Weather—Simes's Light the Rendezvous.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Aug. 10.—Seventeen of the New-York Yacht Club left New-London on Tuesday at 12½, and a dense fog coming on with a strong south-west breeze, several of the yachts made a harbor at Newport. Those which pushed on reached Vineyard Haven between 7 and 8 P. M., in the following order: Dauntless, Commodore BENNETT; Columbia, Rambler, Wanderer, Tidal Wave, Dreadnaught, Foam, Gracie and Vixen. The steam-yacht Herald accompanies the squadron. The yacht Caprice, of Boston, Capt. TRASK, in coming through Fisher's Island Sound, struck on Napatree Point, west of Watch Hill, where she was seen by one of the passing yachts. The Grace and Vixen sailed this morning for Boston, intending to touch at Provincetown en route. The other yachts, which arrived last night, will remain here today, to enable the officers and guests to visit the camp-ground on Gale Bluffs and the vicinity. On the arrival of the yachts that did not reach port last night, the fleet will proceed to Nantucket Roads, where they will be received by the Eastern Squadron. The Sappho, which left New-York on Monday, owing to the thick weather, has not arrived.

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—The Secretary of the Eastern Yacht Club today received the following dispatch from New-Bedford:

Seventeen yachts leave here this forenoon to rendezvous at Minot's Ledge Light. From there we shall form in divisions to meet again.

(Signed,) THOS. SCHUYLER,
Fleet Captain New-York Yacht Squadron.

Another Effort in Behalf of Messner—The Governor Declines to Interfere.

ROCHESTER, Aug. 10.—Several gentlemen interested themselves in behalf of MESSNER, yesterday, and telegraphed the Governor, but his Excellency made the following reply:

To William H. Bowman, J. H. Kelly and William Guggenheim:

My decision in MESSNER's case, announced some days ago, was the result of most careful examination and anxious deliberation. It is final. I shall not interfere.

Taxing Shares of National Banks.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 10.—Judge BLODGETT, of the United States Circuit Court, in the case of the consolidation of thirteen national banks against the City Collector, has decided that the shares of the national banks cannot be assessed at a higher valuation than the par value thereof, and that the tax is in the nature of a royalty upon the denominational value of each share respectively. The Court also held the State law of 1867, providing for the taxation of bank shares, to be wholly void, because it is in contravention of the State Constitution, in that it provides for taxing shareholders in the district where the bank is located, instead of in the district where the shareholder is resident. The taxing power only to be exercised upon persons or properties within the jurisdiction. Shares owned by non-residents cannot be taxed, because such a regulation would be in conflict with the provisions of the Federal Constitution, providing that the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens of the respective States.

LOUISIANA.

The Reform Convention—The Resolutions Adopted.

NEW-ORLEANS, La., Aug. 10.—The Warmoth wing of the Republican Convention met at Turner's Hall at noon today, and 108 delegates answered to the roll. The Congressional Committee was announced, and it is the same as last year. The Committee reported resolutions indorsing the Administration, WARMOTH, and a faithful execution of the constituted provisions for the public education of children without distinction of color; in condemnation of appropriating to individual enterprises; nursing the General Assembly to reduce its expenses; denouncing the acts of the Custom-house party; endeavoring to exclude by force of arms the recognised delegates of the Republican Convention and for other unlawful acts, and expressing the hope these acts are not at the command of President GRANT; indorsing his administration; requesting the removal of the Custom-house party, and the appointment of true Republicans; when it is ascertained the President indorses the acts of the Custom-house officials, the Convention only then withdraws its support from him, and repudiates and condemns him. In conclusion, the resolutions recommended the President of the Convention to appoint twenty citizens to visit Washington and petition for the removal of those persons denounced in the resolution, and requesting United States Senator WEST to inquire into the authority given the Custom-house party. The resolutions were adopted. This closed the business of the Convention.

Gov. WARMOTH was then invited to deliver an address, and complied. The City Press denounce the action of the Custom-house officials for suspending mercantile business yesterday, and characterize it as a gross outrage. Today the Federal troops were removed, and business was transacted as usual in the Custom-house.

PENNSYLVANIA COLLECTORS.

Indebtedness of Ex-Internal Revenue Collectors to the Government—A Letter from Secretary Boutwell.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—A special dispatch to the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph, dated Washington, Aug. 10, says that Secretary BOUTWELL has written the following letter in reply to one from Senator SCOTT asking for information about the accounts of Ex-Internal Revenue Collectors in the State of Pennsylvania:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Aug. 10.

Hon. John Scott, Huntingdon, Penn.:

SIR: In compliance with your request, I transmit herewith a statement showing the cash balances due the United States, June 6, 1871, from Ex-Collectors of Internal Revenue in Pennsylvania, who were out of office on the 30th of June, 1870. In connection therewith, it would invite your attention to the inclosed copy of a letter from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and also the following extract from a letter of the First Controller, under date of Feb. 18, 1871, in reply to a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 15th of December, 1870, transmitting a statement of the balances due June 30, 1870:

The balances and payments as shown by this statement, are those which appear by accounts adjusted; but it is not to be supposed that the whole amount will wholly or in part disappear when future reports and vouchers shall have been transmitted to the Auditor, and been acted upon. In a large proportion of the cases, the balances against Collectors consist of tax lists charged to them, but turned over to their successors in office. Under the existing law the accounting officers cannot credit outgoing Collectors with lists so turned over, unless the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall certify that such outgoing Collector has used due diligence. In the absence of such certificate, the accounting officers cannot credit Collectors with taxes turned over to their successors, and in almost every case a Collector whose appear to be in arrears, though nothing be due from him, until the required certificates shall have been supplied. Very respectfully,

(Signed,) R. W. TAYLOR, Controller.

I am, very respectfully,

(Signed,) GEO. S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, D. C., July 29, 1871.

Hon. R. W. Taylor, Comptroller:

SIR: I inclose a statement showing the cash balances due from the late Collectors of Internal Revenue named thereon on June 26, 1871, classified "delaications" and "unadjusted." The first heading is intended to show those cases where no satisfactory explanation of deficit has been received; the second where, from correspondence and other sources, it seemed probable that final adjustment would account for the defect. Very respectfully,

A. PLEASONTON, Commissioner.

Cash balances due from Ex-Collectors of Internal Revenue in Pennsylvania, June 26, 1871:

J. F. Diehl, Second District, unadjusted, $24,109 54; appointment of President Lincoln.

W. J. Wainwright, Third District, unadjusted, $53,781 81; appointment of President Lincoln.

J. M. Riley, Fourth District, defalcation, $142,999 33; appointment of President Lincoln.

A. Cummings, Fourth District, unadjusted, $762 45; appointment of President Johnson.

I. W. Fowell, Fifth District, defalcation, $33,102 01; appointment of President Lincoln.

D. Luther, Eighth District, unadjusted, $6,005 02; appointment of President Lincoln.

S. F. Foster, Eleventh District, defalcation, $5,118 39; appointment of President Lincoln.

R. L. Scott, Thirteenth District, unadjusted, $3,005 02; appointment of President Lincoln.

C. E. Morris, Sixteenth District, unadjusted, $3,130 57; appointment of President Lincoln.

J. R. Campbell, Eighteenth District, defalcation, $4,972 87; appointment of President Johnson.

H. Guernsey, Eighteenth District, defalcation, $18,192 67; appointment of President Johnson.

J. W. Douglass, Nineteenth District, unadjusted, $2,457 70; appointment of President Lincoln.

S. Mohrhead, Twenty-third District, unadjusted, $194 45; appointment of President Johnson.

R. L. Brown, Twenty-third District, unadjusted, $2,771 32; appointment of President Grant.

A. H. Reeder, Twenty-fourth District, defalcation, $13,199 21; appointment of President Johnson.

The amount of Internal revenue tax collected in Pennsylvania is about $160,000,000. It will be observed that in the First, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth, Tenth, Twelfth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Twentieth, Twenty-first and Twenty-second Districts, which comprise some of the heaviest collection districts in the collection sections of the State, the United States has not owing to it a single dollar. On the contrary, the Government owes money to the Collectors of these districts, in some instances, and has already refunded to many of them.

NOTE.—There is due the Collector of the Nineteenth District $1,704 on disbursements; disbursing account.

The Scott Centenary—President Grant's Reply.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 10.—President GRANT sent the following answer to Earl of DALKEITH, presiding officer at the Scott Centennial Celebration at Edinburgh:

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 10, 1871.

To the Right Honorable the Earl of Dalkeith, Edinburgh, Scotland:

Owing to my absence from home, I did not receive your congratulations and expressions of friendship for the American people in time to send a reply to be read at the Centennial Celebration of that eminent scholar and historian whose birth you commemorate. The American people, who have been instructed and edified by Sir WALTER SCOTT's works of history, poetry and fiction, will highly appreciate your cordial expressions of friendship, and reciprocate them in all sincerity.

(Signed,) U. S. GRANT.

The Saengerrunde Festival.

The Summer night's festival of the New-York Saengerrunde, at Jones' Wood, yesterday, was one of the finest affairs of the season, and was attended by many of the wealthy and influential German residents of this City. The Society includes ninety vocalists, who are adepts in their art, and who proved highly entertaining on this occasion. The Belvedere, where the dancing took place, was tastefully decorated, and brilliantly illuminated in the evening. That the Committee of Arrangements fully succeeded in its efforts to make the affair a success was the concurrent testimony of all who participated in it.

WASHINGTON.

What Has been Done About the New Loan in Europe.

Republican Prospects in Ohio and California—Ottawa University—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The announcement in yesterday's cable news that the remainder of the $200,000,000 of the five per cent. loan offered by Secretary BOUTWELL, not yet taken, had been negotiated by Judge RICHARDSON, did not receive much attention last night, on account of the meagreness of details, though its truth was not generally doubted. But today, since the news has been fully confirmed, and more of the details made known, there has been a good deal of excitement and not a little genuine enthusiasm. It seems that some four weeks ago, Judge RICHARDSON telegraphed to Mr. BOUTWELL, a statement of a proposition of the American bankers, JAY COOKE, McCULLOCH & Co., to provide for the disposal of a portion of the five per cent. loan above mentioned. That proposition was the basis of the negotiation which has been made, though its terms were considerably modified by telegraphic correspondence subsequently. The circular of the Secretary to the national banks explains the terms and conditions so far as they are concerned when the sixty days during which they have the opportunity to subscribe has passed. The amount not then disposed of will be taken by the syndicate, or combination of bankers, which has been formed for the purpose. It will be remembered that the law fixes the limit of expense to be incurred by the Secretary in disposing of the loan at one-half of one per cent. If the banks subscribe for $50,000,000, as they have the chance to do, there will still be $50,000,000 for the syndicate to take unconditionally, bearing all the subsequent expenses and reaping all the subsequent profits from holding or disposing of it. While the exchange of this first two hundred million will cause no inconsiderable saving annually in the way of interest, the greatest good now expected to result from it is the impetus it will give to negotiations for the rest of the new bonds provided for by law. The following is the circular addressed by the Secretary to the national banks:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Aug. 10, 1871.

SIR: I take the liberty to inform you that arrangements have been made for the disposal of the remainder of the bonds offered by the Secretary of the Treasury on the 28th of February last, being about $190,000,000. The arrangement is subject to the condition that the national banks of the United States shall have the opportunity within sixty days from this date to subscribe for any sum or sums not exceeding $50,000,000 in all. Banks making or obtaining subscriptions payable in coin will be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury as depositories of public money, upon the usual condition of placing in the hands of the Treasurer of the United States, bonds of the United States for the security of such deposits. At the commencement of each month notice will be given of the redemption of an amount of bonds equal to the amounts of subscriptions in coin for the preceding months, interest to cease in ninety days from the date of such notice. As the bonds specified shall mature, the deposits will be withdrawn from the several banks proportionately. A commission of one-eighth of one per cent. will be allowed upon all subscriptions made or obtained by national banks. Very respectfully,

(Signed,) GEO. S. BOUTWELL, Secretary.

To the Cashier of the National Bank, ——

The following letter was today sent to the agents heretofore designated:

Negotiations having been perfected for the sale of the remainder of the two hundred millions of five per cent. bonds offered to the public by the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury on the 28th of February last, the authority of the agents heretofore designated is limited to the sale of equal amounts of the four and a half and five per cent. bonds, or equal amounts of four and five per cent. bonds.

PROSPECTS OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

Political news received here from Ohio looks more encouraging than ever for a Republican success, not only in electing the State ticket, but in securing the Legislature. The Sunday law discussion is dropping out of sight, because the Democrats fear they must lose more than they would gain by using it in the canvass. But for this disturbing element, Republican success has been undoubted. Republican prospects seem hopeful in California, though there is but a narrow margin for a majority.

THE OTTAWA TRUST LANDS.

The Secretary of the Interior decides that the patents for the Ottawa trust lands sold to the Ottawa University must be delivered to the Emory Board of Trustees, in accordance with the opinion of the Attorney-General, some time ago given, that that was the legal Board. The question of how to compel the Board to fulfil its trust in the management of the school remains under examination, to be decided as soon as the case is fully presented and made up.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

COMMISSIONER DOUGLASS.

A statement recently has been published charging JNO. W. DOUGLASS, late Collector of Nineteenth District, Pennsylvania, and now Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with being a defaulter to the amount of nearly $3,000, that sum being charged on the books of the Treasury Department as a balance due from him. On inquiry, today, it is ascertained that when he was the Collector of the Nineteenth District of Pennsylvania, his deputy stole from the office $17,000. Mr. DOUGLASS recovered $9,000 from the deputies' sureties, and paid this into the Treasury, together with other thousands which he realized by the sale and mortgage of his own private property. A credit has been given him for $1,100 additional, thus reducing the balance due to the Government to $1,650 only. A claim for relief is now pending before Congress, as in similar cases Congress having readily relieved public officers, the latest instances being the present Customs Collector and his predecessor of Baltimore, where it was shown they had been robbed by their deputies through no neglect of their own.

NATIONAL BANKS.

JOHN JAY KNOX, Acting Controller of the Currency, has authorized the following national banks during the months of July and August: First National Bank of Greenville, Ill., $100,000; Cook County Bank of Chicago, $200,000; First, Mason City, Ill., $50,000; Second, Charleston, Ill., $100,000; Second, Winona, Minn., $100,000; Newburry, S. C., $50,000; Spartanburg, S. C., $50,000; First, Brownsville, Nebraska, $100,000; Nebraska City, $100,000; German, Covington, Ky., $250,000; Covington City, $200,000; First, Tuskaloosa, Ala., $50,000; First, Grand Haven, Mich., $100,000; First, Frankfort, Ind., $100,000; Bates County, Butler, Mo., $50,000; First, Warrenburgh, Mo., $50,000; Valley, St. Louis, $250,000; Exchange, Augusta, Ga., $250,000.

Hero Kuklux Outrages in South Carolina.

A letter from Spartanburg, S. C., to the Columbia Union, under date of Aug. 7, says:

"The Spartanburg Kuklux are still on the rampage. On last Thursday night Mr. WILLIAM QUINN, a white man in Pacolet township, was whipped in the most horrible manner. His back, arms and other parts of his body were cut and pounded to a jelly, and months will elapse before he recovers, even if his life should be saved. On Tuesday night they seized another native, a colored man, and whipped him most barbarously. Report says also, that a man was murdered last week, in the upper part of the county, but I have as yet had no opportunity to investigate it. For a short time after the Congressional Committee left, there seemed to be a lull in the operations of the Kuklux, but the above named occurrences aroused all the fears of the people. Two men have been arrested, charged with being the perpetrators of the outrage upon Mr. QUINN, and they will be taken to Greenville for trial before the United States Court. One of them is supposed to have been with the party that made the attack upon Gen. B. F. BATES last May."

THE TURF.

Third Day of the Buffalo Park Meeting—Large Attendance of Spectators.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 10.—The attendance at the Driving Park, today, was much larger than on any previous day. Fifteen thousand persons were on the ground, a large proportion of whom were ladies. The display of private equipages and fast teams was very fine. Among the visitors today Commodore VANDERBILT and Col. JAMES FISK, Jr., attracted much attention. The former occupied a private stand in front of the judges, and the latter filled a chair in the judges' stand. The fact of Commodore VANDERBILT being the owner of the horse Myron Perry, entered for the 2:24 race, caused a report to be circulated that the contest between that horse and Hotspur was Erie against Central. In the course of the race, when the chances fluctuated for or against either animal, the excitement grew to fever heat, and pool-selling was accelerated in proportion. A great deal of money changed hands on the result of the two races today, over $500,000 being in the pools. The betting was never known to be so brisk. Hotspur in the last heat sold in the pool as high as $630 against $90 for the field. The weather was delightfully cool, and the races proceeded. The most interesting contest of the meeting, the 2:30 race, was called promptly at 2½ o'clock. Sixteen horses were entered and ten started—Lady Abdallah, Lady Goldust, Sappho, Ristori, Kentucky Girl, Lydee Picton, drawn. The race was won by Uncle Abe in three straight heats. C. J. HAMLIN and MYRON P. BUSH, of Buffalo, and GEO. C. HALL, of Prospect Park, Brooklyn, acting as judges.

The 2:24 race was trotted alternately with the 2:30 race. Five heats were trotted, and the race was won by Hotspur. The first heat was declared a dead heat between Byron and Hotspur. This race was intensely interesting, very excited, much dissatisfaction being manifested at the ruling of the judges in the third heat, in placing Myron Perry fourth for running and foul driving, his driver having pocketed Tommy Jefferson on the homestretch, while the latter horse was doing some good trotting, with a prospect of gaining the heat. FRANK PERRY, owner of Byron, withdrew his horse on the second heat, on account of the decision of the judges in declaring the heat dead. The trots in this race were closely contested. The horses were never more than a length apart. Half way round the course on each heat they were lapped. Seven horses entered and five started. Tammany and J. D. McMann drawn.

PURSE No. 7—$6,000, for horses that never trotted better than 2:24; $3,500, $1,500, $1,000.

The following is the average of the pool selling in to-morrows races: In the 2:40 race—Judge Fullerton, 100; Brigham, 75; the field, 25.

In the $5,000 race, (the pools selling with Goldsmith's Maid out,) American Girl, 80; Lucy, 35.

A match has just been made for $2,500 for a trot between Tommy Jefferson and Wilkes for Saturday next.

BENNETT INSURANCE CASE.

The Fire Caused by the Connivance of Samuel P. Bennett.

SYRACUSE, Aug. 10.—The referees in the Bennett insurance case, Judges WM. J. BACON, ALEX. S. JOHNSON and S. T. HOLMES, of Utica, forwarded their decision yesterday afternoon to the counsel for the parties residing in this city. The decision is adverse to the creditors of Mr. BENNETT, to whom he had assigned his insurance policies, and in favor of the insurance companies. The amount of insurance in question was some $117,000, which the insurance companies will of course retain. The costs of the suit cannot be less than $10,000. This sum TAPPT and other New-York creditors will have to pay, in addition to losing the demands against BENNETT. There were thirty-two other suits with the same plaintiff, and different companies defendants. The referees make the same report in each suit.

THE WEATHER.

Synopsis of Events and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11—1 A. M.—The barometer has continued rising slowly in the Middle and Eastern States since Wednesday night, and the central area of highest pressure has moved from West Virginia slightly eastward. The area of lowest pressure has removed from Minnesota south-eastward to Michigan and Central Illinois. The temperature has risen slightly in New-England, fallen on the South Atlantic, and risen from Illinois north-eastward. North-westerly winds, with clear weather and smoky haze has continued from New-York to Virginia and eastward. Threatening weather, with light rains, has prevailed from Tennessee, south and east. A narrow belt of heavy rain and threatening weather has advanced, on Thursday evening, eastward, and now extends from Lake Huron to eastern Kansas, with severe local storms.

PROBABILITIES.

The disturbances now prevailing in Michigan and Northern Illinois will probably extend tonight over Lake Erie and Western Kentucky, followed by rapidly rising barometer and clear, cool weather from Lake Huron to Indiana and westward. Continued cloudy weather, with light rains, is probable for the Southern and Gulf States. Falling barometer, with cloudy weather, will probably spread over the Middle and Eastern States.

The Maine Central Disaster—Fifty in all Injured.

BUTLER, of Elsworth, severe cut over right temple, and smaller cuts on neck and right side; ELIZA JANE DOGGETT, Haverhill, severely bruised in head and neck; C. S. PENNELL, of Brunswick, fractured rib; Miss MINNIE H. BURR, of Chelsea, Mass., previously, reported, proved to have right elbow dislocated. A Coroner's inquest is being held upon the body of THOMAS GALLAGHER, and will afterward adjourn to the place of disaster. The whole number of injured reaches fifty.

THE GREAT BOAT-RACE.

Another Tyne Crew to Contest for the Championship—Great Rush of Visitors.

HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 10.—Letters received by the mail steamer this morning render it certain that another Tyne crew will enter for the great four-oared race. The manager of the Windsor and Annapolis Railway says that at least 7,000 persons from the States and elsewhere will come by that line to attend the great carnival. The North American arrived today, and leaves for Liverpool at noon Saturday.

ST. JOHNS, N. B., Aug. 10.—The steam-ship New-Brunswick arrived from Boston this evening, with over 500 excursionists. The hotels are crowded, and the Common Council has appointed a committee to devise means for the accommodation of the rush of strangers.

The Buffenbarger Case.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 10.—The Coroner's investigation of the Buffenbarger poisoning case closed at London, today. The jury returned a verdict that poison was administered to PETER BUFFENBARGER by some person or persons to them unknown. Prof. WORMLEY testified to a chemical examination of the stomach and liver, in both of which he found unmistakable traces of arsenic; that it was possible to introduce arsenic into the liver after death; he did not discover sufficient arsenic to produce death under ordinary circumstances, but the finding of a small quantity was not proof that there was not a larger at the time of death. Other witnesses testified that the organs examined by WORMLEY were taken from the body of BUFFENBARGER.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

The State Camp of Patriotic Sons of America, in Harrisburg, Penn., indefinitely postponed a resolution to establish a national camp. The morning session yesterday was occupied in discussing a resolution declaring abhorrence of Roman Catholicism; enjoining opposition to the spread of its principles by never voting for a Roman Catholic for any office of honor, trust or profit whatever. The resolution was declared out of order.

A Russian war steamer recently arrived in Peruvian waters and saluted the Peruvian fleet, but the salute was unanswered. The Russian commander asked for an explanation of the insult and the reply was that the Peruvian Navy had been disarmed by order of the President. The land batteries however saluted the Russian vessel.

A fire broke out at the head of Slope No. 2, inside of No. 6 Mine of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, near Mauch Chunk, Penn., at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. HENRY B. LEBOY, at New-Hamburg, yesterday, won a two and a half mile race, in his shell-boat, against JOHN LEBOY, W. A. LAWSON and J. C. CURTIS, in a six-oared working boat. Time, nineteen minutes and fifteen seconds. LEBOY won by twenty lengths.

A fire broke out in PICKET & DRURY'S paint-shop, Oswego, N. Y., at 4 P. M. yesterday. The building was partly destroyed, and COOPER'S bakery and RICE'S grocery, adjoining, were damaged by water. Total loss, $20,000; insurance, $14,000.

CUBAN AFFAIRS.

The Troubles at Porto Rico—An Account of the Street Riots—The Recruiting for the Havana Volunteers—Island War News.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, Aug. 5, 1871.

The Porto Rico question has assumed a new phase, and with it the question of Cuba. A few weeks ago I wrote fully on this subject, and my information proved, I expect, except insomuch that events developed themselves much more rapidly than was expected by the public, owing to the action by the radical party in Porto Rico. The documents received are somewhat confused and mysterious, as only the relation of an unimportant disturbance is given—that is to say, unimportant in respect of the number of killed and wounded, but important as the beginning of the revolution in Porto Rico, which it is generally supposed to be. No news from Porto Rico direct has yet reached us, our information having come here via St. Thomas, whence it had been telegraphed from the former island, and as the cable must be more or less under the control of the Spanish officials, it is more than likely that such particulars as we know are sifted through Spanish sieves and give only a one-sided view of the disturbance, with portions as displeasing to the authorities. We must await the full particulars, the arrival of the Spanish steamer from Cadiz, now overdue, and which touches at Porto Rico on her way here. The revolutionary spirit has been on the eve of breaking out for a long time past, and has only been kept within bounds by the leaders of the radical party, who were determined to wrest the island from Spain without fighting for it. So far all their plans and projects have had a continued success. Some hot-blooded spirits have long fretted over the apparent slowness of emancipation, and the outbreak of Lare was the first fruit of their untimely action. Flushed with their success at the recent elections, their numerical superiority over the Spaniards, and the tacit aid of many Spaniards themselves, these hot-headed radicals have again preached and abetted open rebellion and instigated the colored population to begin the row, which the latter, many of whom are still held as slaves, were nothing loth to inaugurate. These extreme radicals also act under the impression that any disturbance in Porto Rico, no matter how small, will aid the revolutionary cause in Cuba, both morally and materially, and in this they are right; it is positively known that since the outbreak of the revolution in Cuba more natives from Porto Rico have joined the Cuban rebels than from many a place in Cuba itself; but this is foreign to the subject, and only tends to illustrate the propensities of the Porto Ricans to become an independent Spanish-American country.

THE DISTURBANCES.

The Spaniards in Porto Rico, misled by the articles of Cuban journals, and prompted by their patriotism, began to form volunteer companies, and about one thousand volunteers are at the present time organized and armed in the island. The islanders saw this movement with disgust, and feared that a part of their countrymen might become tainted with Españolism, as so many hundreds of Cubans are; that they might even take up arms against their countrymen in case of an outbreak, and, as in Cuba, form the nucleus of the real fighting men, and organize those terrible counter-guerrillas, who, composed of natives of the island, commit such havoc among their revolutionary countrymen. But whatever the motive may have been, the ultra radicals refused to have any person dressed in volunteer uniform parade the streets, either singly or collectively. Wherever a volunteer appeared he was hooted by the populace, and threatened with violence in some cases. No demonstrations of hostility had been made against the regular troops until the evening of the 26th, during the music on the Plaza de Armas, in front of the Captain-General's palace, when several stones were flung from the neighboring jail, striking a couple of soldiers. The volunteers had received that same morning an order from the Captain-General not to appear on the streets in uniform, so as to avoid complications. Another soldier, who was walking alone, remarked: "This is getting unbearable. I advise nobody to fling stones at me else they'll suffer for it." He had hardly spoken these words when a stone struck him in the face. Seeing a dandified negro close by, he suspected him to be the author, and drawing his sword began the attack. Another negro, probably the one who flung the stone, saw the affair, and rushing up to the soldier stabbed him in the back. This enabled the first one to escape, the soldier cutting down the negro who had stabbed him. Negroes and soldiers flocked together, houses were barricaded, and a scene of indescribable confusion ensued, the cries of the combatants in the street, and the women and children inside of their houses, forming a strange contrast, this being the first time that the hitherto peaceable capital, San Juan de Puerto Rico, has witnessed a riot. The fighting continued in the streets wherever a negro met a soldier or a soldier a negro, until armed patrols appeared, and at 11 P. M. quiet was restored. The Captain-General immediately proclaimed martial law throughout the island and the capital itself in a state of siege. The result of the riot is stated to be three soldiers and one officer killed, nineteen men wounded, and five negroes killed and a very large number wounded. The police and armed patrols arrested a number of negroes during the night, and searched several houses for hidden arms. The Spanish party accuses the radicals of having lured the negroes to commit these excesses, and the natives say that the Spaniards purposely provoked the conflict. Either story is improbable, and the true explanation of the occurrence may be summed up in the fact that the natives, black and white, hate and execrate the Spaniards, and that the feeling is mutual. Until the morning of the 28th, the tranquility of the capital had remained unaltered, but reports were in circulation that outbreaks had occurred at Mayagues and other points. The Diario and Voz de Cuba refer to these excesses in a very desponding manner, making a show of strength which unfortunately for the Spaniards does not exist.

RECRUITS FOR THE VOLUNTEERS.

The enlistment of volunteers is continued with unabated energy. Your correspondent met three volunteers yesterday, of whom one has been a refugee in New-York; the second, a member of CASTELLANO'S rifleros, and who surrendered six months ago, and the third a Government employe for safety's sake, all three hating Spain and the Spaniards, and particularly the volunteers, with the intensity their natures are capable of. One of the group jocularly remarked: "Ain't we nice patriots and true defenders of the nation! After this, CESPEDES stands a good chance of becoming the Colonel of a volunteer battalion." It is extremely doubtful whether this indiscriminate enlistment of volunteers will prove as beneficial as is expected, although it will certainly diminish the duties of the old volunteer by a great deal, and as many of the new volunteers are persons whose interests would suffer materially in any disturbance should occur, they will constitute an element to oppose to the lower classes and rouchs in case of emergency. The Voz de Cuba speaks of Paris under the reign of the Communists, and compares it to the Island of Cuba, partly so at present, and as a whole in future, unless the Spaniards should triumph. In another editorial the Voz preaches blind obedience to the authorities, and referring to those who speak or act against the authorities or laws as persons dangerous to the community.

WAR NEWS.

The news from the seat of war is scarce. A portion of the blockading fleet near Nuevitas hauled near Boca Grande, the men having to swim part of the way. They destroyed some salt works which the Cubans had erected. BASILIO FERNANDEZ, commander of a Cuban guerrilla band, was killed near Cienfuegos on the 27th. This band was formerly commanded by FELIX AMPARO and FELIX CAPOTE, both of whom are dead. [illegible] At Puerto Principe IGNACIO GONZALES and ANTONIO RODRIGUES, two insurrectos who were caught supplying the Cubans with clothing, were executed on the 26th.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

A flash of lightning struck the wooden barracks at the Principe Castle, on Wednesday, during the thunder-storm, killing [illegible] Major JOSE RUIZ and his servant, and stunning another officer and two soldiers.

STATISTICS OF THE STRUGGLE.

During the last fortnight in July, the Spaniards killed 431 Cubans and captured forty-four, losing themselves only sixteen killed and forty-one wounded. This is according to the official statement published in the Gaceta, and signed by the other of Minister. It is not obligatory to believe all settlements of this nature, and personal here the correctness of the statement, but as those abroad have a perfect right to form their own opinion, no law having yet been issued here to the contrary, [illegible] TACON TABLE OF MEXICODO.

A lady in Mobile is now confined to her bed from the effects of poison, manifesting itself in sores about the mouth, caused by biting green sewing silk while working with it.

The next election to be held, is that in West Virginia, to decide whether a State Convention shall be held. It is a Democratic measure. The date of the election is Aug. 24.

A lady in Missouri, who had been suffering from typhoid fever, became partly deranged, and imagined that if she swallowed some needles she would recover. She took a piece of paper, wrapper and all, under this hallucination. Perhaps it is needless to say that she is dead.

Hon. ALEXANDER H. RICE is now absent from Massachusetts on business connected with the North-west, but the Boston Traveller says that he will yield to the strong desire that has been manifested by leading Republicans in various parts of the State, that he should be a candidate for Governor and allow his name to be used for the office.

WILLIAM H. CLAGGETT, whom the Republicans of Montana have just elected delegate to Congress, is a son of Judge CLAGGETT, of Iowa, a strong Democrat. He was a member of the first State Senate of Nevada, was very popular, and has since his residence in Montana been known there as the "silver-tongued orator of the mountain." He is, and always has been a Republican.

What foundation there was for the report that Pay-master G. K. KORTLAND was shot in Utica, on Tuesday, by FORD P. HALL, of Rochester, it seems difficult at present to ascertain. It is asserted that Mr. HALL was in Buffalo on Tuesday, and in Rochester on Tuesday night. He asserts that he has not recently been in Utica, and Mr. KORTLAND says he never saw him to his knowledge.

A young lady, daughter of a prominent citizen of New-Brunswick, N. J., was successful in a second attempt to elope with the man of her choice a few evenings ago. The first, by railroad, was frustrated by her father; the second was made in a private conveyance. The Fredonian says they have probably this time succeeded in reaching a destination where they may repent at leisure, as they undoubtedly will.

A very discreet young Boston clergyman, while out sailing the other day, was saluted by two ladies in a dory, who waved their handkerchiefs at him. Being near enough to see that they were strangers to him, he straightway sailed away. Subsequently he learned from friends of the ladies that they had become too tired to row further, and wished to obtain assistance from him.

For several months, it is asserted, a movement has been in progress in Toronto for the organization of Roman Catholics for political purposes. A league has been formed, local committees have been formed in every Ward, and it is proposed to extend its operations over the entire Province. The object is said to be to secure from the Governments which may be in power in Ottawa and in Toronto a share of the offices.

Later letters than that mentioned yesterday, received by Mr. RISLEY from his daughters in Constantinople, say that both they and Mr. SEWARD were rapidly recovering from fatigue after their hard jaunt in Egypt and that after all they felt inclined to tarry in Europe, instead of coming directly home, as they had almost decided to do. The plan then being considered (July 14) was to reside in Italy through the coming Winter, and make the tour of Europe in the Spring.

The Young Democrats of Massachusetts have marched the Old-timers. The Boston Traveller says that their movement has for its object the nomination for Governor of one of the most prominent members of the Democratic Party in the State who has not taken an active part for years, and that the gentleman alluded to, if willing to accept the nomination, will poll a large vote, especially in Essex County.

The splendid canvass which Gen. JOHN M. HARLAN has made for the Governorship of Kentucky, the heavy inroad which has been made upon the Democratic Party, and the situation of the State, prompt the Cincinnati Gazette to urge him for the nomination for Vice-President, in the belief that it would give much strength to the Republican Party in the State, and probably place Kentucky among those which will be carried by the Republican ticket.

There is nothing like a wife to bring a man to his senses. It is related of one in Illinois that recently he was sent home from the State Asylum for the insane as incurably mad. On arriving he first saw his daughters, and said, "Well, girls, you are keeping house alone, are you?" His wife entered the room and he started as from a dream, throwing both hands to his head and exclaiming: "Jane, I thought you were dead; is it indeed you?" The shock did for him what medical aid had not done. He recovered his reason entirely, and [illegible] tainable.

Dispatches from Louisville to the Cincinnati Gazette say that returns of the election in Kentucky show a Democratic loss on the majority in the last Gubernatorial race in 1867 of 24,145, in the following counties: Jefferson, Marion, Daviess, Hancock, Lincoln, Washington, Adair, Casey, Campbell, Pendleton, Scott, Barren, Breckinridge, Christian, Bourbon, Woodford, Anderson, Nicholas, Franklin, Ohio, Bullitt, Fayette, Todd and Shelby. The Republicans have gained representatives in Kenkcastle, Adair, Ohio, Christian, and probably Barren, besides those already reported. The returns indicate a very large vote all over the State.

A year ago VALLANDIGHAM declared in a letter to a friend, that he would no longer submit, without reply in very plain English, to any suggestions or insinuations from Democratic speakers that implied condemnation of his course during the war, or any possible hesitancy as to the purity and patriotism of his motives in all that he said or did as to the war. He said: "I meet every man cordially who agrees with me on the issues of to-day, asking no questions as to the past. Whether he or I was right on the war question, it is useless and dangerous to consider or discuss. He may have been honest and patriotic. I know that I was."

The Boston Traveller, which is excellent authority in this matter, (as in so many others, less notably,) has this paragraph: "It is understood that the members of the Prohibitory Law Party of this State do not intend to enter the field as an organization at present, though there are active and irrepressible politicians among them who will give no rest unto the soles of their feet from the present time until the State election. Their Executive Committee will have a meeting about the last of this month, when it is expected that a call will be issued for a State Convention to meet after the Republican Convention. Leading men of their party say their policy, this year, will be to make up the ticket by State and local officers from [illegible] Democratic men representing their [illegible] nominations by other organizations.

Mr. FLETCHER DOUGLASS, from the Indianapolis Journal describes as a wealthy philanthropist of Crawfordsville, Ind., wants to bet from $1,000 to $5,000 that there is no humbug, trick or deceit in the "spirit photographs" taken at his son's rooms in Indianapolis. The money to be applied to the relief of the widows and orphans of that city, whichever side wins. The pictures are to be taken by an artist chosen by whoever takes the bet, and [illegible] that the spirit-artist shall be permitted to attend with his hand upon the camera while the exposures of the plate is being made, and that no other artist, not a spiritualist, shall follow the investigation, to see that no result is destroyed.

A little boy, seven years old, entered the tan-yard of his father, in Cincinnati, on Tuesday evening after the departure of the workmen, and was set upon by a fierce and howling set of dogs, thirteen in number. He was quickly thrown down and rolled in the filth of the yard until all semblance of humanity had left him. Black, bleeding and dying, he clung with his face downward to the earth with the energy of despair. The cries of the dogs attracted the attention of neighbors, and a bold man sprang over the fence to the rescue, but was immediately driven out by the now ravenous dogs. Then other persons entered with pitchforks, and people driving on the avenue stopped and went to the rescue with knives and pistols. It was brief and bloody work. The dogs were all slain. The little boy, scarcely alive, was taken to a house near by. The flesh it was found had been torn from his scalp; there were great ugly gashes in his forehead, cheeks and lips. Ghastly holes, their edges lacerated with tooth-marks, were under his arms; and other parts of his delicate body bore wounds beyond description in their ugly nature. There is scarcely a possibility of his recovery.

The Hartford Post publishes at length all the resolutions passed by the Connecticut Legislature relating to the erection of a new Capitol building in Hartford. The first resolution appropriates from the State Treasury the sum of $500,000 to aid in its erection. The second authorizes a city meeting to vote on the issue of "Capitol bonds." The third allows the issue of such bonds to the amount of $1,000,000, the bonds to have coupons attached, and to bear six per cent. interest and be free from taxation. The fourth provides that the State shall not bear any of the expense of the site and appoints Gov. Marshall Jewell, Hons. William D. Bishop, William A. Buckingham, William H. Barnum, and William D. Shipman Commissioners on the part of the State to confer with the authorities of the city to determine upon a site, and to control the expenditure of the State's appropriation, and by the fifth resolution to contract for and erect a suitable building. To these is added an amendment to the city charter to enable the Court of Common Council to acquire the right to land for the building by purchase, if necessary.

FREE DRUGGISTS.

Further Action Taken Thereupon by Physicians.

Yesterday afternoon, the members of the Apothecaries Union met in the small chapel of the University, Dr. COOK occupying the chair. About 100 persons were present. Mr. ROSENAU, of the Executive Committee, reported that he had conferred with the German and other organizations, whose objects were similar to this, and he had found them all in favor of uniting their forces. The Chairman said he understood several members had taken legal advice on the subject of enforcing the present law, and he would like to hear their reports. He had himself consulted an eminent member of the Bar, and had been assured by him that they would have no trouble. The law was unconstitutional, so his legal adviser thought, and would be set aside by the Court of Appeals. He had also been advised that the best thing the Union could do was to get out an injunction at once and stop all further action in Union-square.

Reports were read from the Ward Committees, showing a large increase in the number of names added to the roll.

A resolution was offered that the Executive Committee be instructed to take legal action at once against the Examining Commissioners. An amendment was offered by Mr. FRENKLIN that the Committee be simply instructed to take legal action. Could the best physician there be found, take was a consult a good lawyer, and to ascertain in what relation they stood to the law. These meetings were worse than useless, and were a shocking waste of time, unless something decided was done. Talk amounted to nothing. If the law was unconstitutional they ought to submit to test the case of the Union was not to evade the law, or to screen themselves from an examination. No man present feared an examination, but it was an indignity to men who had been in the business for forty years, to say to them now that they must come forward and show their qualifications. This objection of course did not apply to the younger men, but all were the same to him. It was arbitrary and unfair. His hope was good legal advice would be taken, and the written opinion obtained be forthcoming at the next meeting. He had heard it said that one eminent lawyer consulted had pronounced against them, and assured them that they had nothing to stand upon in their opposition to the law. Perhaps Mr. ROBBINS could give information on this point.

Mr. ROBBINS objected to the charge of $20 for a certificate. No other State charged more than $5, or $10 at most, just enough, in fact, to pay expenses. The letter of the Commissioners of Wednesday last to the graduates might be considered a piece of composition, but it was a remarkable document. These men were created by the celebrated Assemblyman Irving, the noted politician and prize-fighter, and Mayor HALL. They have the assurance to say that they could not respect the diplomas of any of the schools of pharmacy in Europe or America, and that it was to the interest of men like Dr. HOFFMAN, the able author on pharmacy in the United States, to pay $20 for their license or diploma, as it would add to their dignity. The necessity for such a gentleman going before the Commissioners was simply an indignity, as none of them could enter into a conversation with Dr. HOFFMAN. The examination, as far as it had proceeded, was a farce, and the sooner it was taken out of their hands the better. If any gentleman applied to him for a situation, showing one of these diplomas, he would tell him as he would not give him a situation for what he [illegible] and that he had been defrauded for the sole purpose of making other people rich. Dr. FREDERICK HOFFMAN then read an address on the "Aims and Purposes of the Pharmaceutical Profession," in which he contended that a scientific education was necessary for the pharmacist's profession, particularly in large cities. He argued that the pharmaceutists had done their part by establishing schools and colleges, while our legislators had done little or nothing. His objections to the present law were that it did not provide for compulsory education or for testing the purity of drugs.

The address was directed to be printed and distributed.

A gentleman proposed that a committee should be appointed to wait on the Mayor, and lay their grievances before him.

Mr. ROBBINS said the Mayor must necessarily be in favor of the law, or he would not have appointed Commissioners to carry it out. After getting out an injunction against the Commissioners, that could not be done. He would tell them, not exactly as a lawyer, but as a pharmaceutical lawyer, that they could only get out an injunction when they were attacked individually for non-compliance with the law.

A gentleman remarked that he did not think the law would ever be enforced. The laws in relation to the sale of poisons, and some others were a dead letter.

Mr. ROBBINS said they might be sure this law will be enforced, for the reason that the Legislature made $5,000 per annum upon it. The other laws had no money in them, and consequently were not enforced.

Without further action, the meeting adjourned subject to call.

Resolutions also passed censuring the action of the City authorities in reference to the Orange [illegible] Governor. The Seventh-ward Democratic Association of the Fourth Ward has announced [illegible] day, the call of forty-three citizens of this district, and [illegible] number nearly one hundred [illegible] members.

THE WESTFIELD DISASTER.

Continuation of the Coroner's Inquest—Examination of the President, Superintendent and Pilot—Additional Facts in the Case.

The inquest respecting the death of the victims of the explosion of the Westfield was continued yesterday morning at 9½ o'clock, by Coroner KEENAN, in the chamber of the Board of Assistant Aldermen. Beyond the witnesses called on behalf of the prosecution in the cases connected with the case, there were very few spectators present.

The first witness sworn was JACOB H. VANDERBILT, brother to the Commodore, he said he was President of the Staten Island Railroad and Staten Island Ferry, the property of the Company consisted of four or five boats. Each Railroad [illegible] was connected with a Board of Directors, who met four times a year for the purpose of examining together and considering business generally; the Financial Committee were invested with full powers to bargain for the making and repairing of boats. [illegible] superintendent, Mr. BRAMHALL, was intrusted with the charge of all the repairs necessary to be made on the ferry-boats; the boats run every hour and cease to run at twelve o'clock; [illegible] every night the boats are thoroughly cleaned; [illegible] time he could not say; the other [illegible] month travels every day on the boats he never remarked particularly the amount of steam they were in the habit of carrying; [illegible] could not say the pressure carried last fall; [illegible] usual pressure to steam on the Westfield and the other boats of the Company was from twenty to twenty-seven pounds; the average pressure was [illegible] but the average pressure carried was from twenty-five pounds; at the time of the explosion [illegible] the boat was under the charge of steam carried was from twenty-three to twenty-four pounds; at three o'clock on the fatal Sunday he first heard an account of the explosion; [illegible] he was informed by two men; [illegible] and has not been aboard of the boat since.

In reply to a juror, the witness said the cost of repairing the Westfield was [illegible] $2,000; in getting the Westfield built, the cost was [illegible] $80,000; at the time of the steamer Westfield was built by my brother in 1865, and sold to MR. GEORGE LAW, who in return disposed of her to the Staten Island Ferry Company; the Company must have thought the boat good, [illegible] unusually discharged, according to the questions he had made; the Westfield would only have been in use six years instead of nine; fresh water is always used in the boilers.

JOHN MCCARTHY, pilot, residence Quarantine, testified that at the time of the explosion he was in the barge pilot-office; he went into the pilot-house of the Westfield at twenty minutes to two o'clock; and after the explosion he threw open the door, but the smoke and heat prevented him from seeing what he did next as his consciousness deserted him, owing to the effects of the explosion; as the boat was made fast after arriving from Staten Island he saw the engineer putting water into the boilers; saw the engineer in the engine-house for a few minutes prior to the explosion, but lost sight of him after that; he never knew the Westfield to be run at a higher pressure than twenty-five pounds to the square inch; when the steam was blown off before the explosion it sounded as natural as usual.

To a JUROR.—The bolt which usually indicates an immediate stand had not been rung before the explosion took place; there was no fog in the river; he knew of the fact that the Westfield had to wait for the approach of another boat that was coming in at the time.

To DR. BEACH.—That was the first trip we had made that day; the steam-gauge in question blows off at 25 o'clock, several times during the day; the engineer necessarily do so every time he comes to the dock; the whistle sounds; he orders, is generally blown five minutes before the boat is due.

To a JUROR.—The bell which rings before the explosion took place; there was no fog in the river; he knew of the fact that the Westfield had to wait for the approach of another boat that was coming in at the time.

To DR. BEACH.—That was the first trip we had made that day; the steam-gauge in question blows off at 25 o'clock, several times during the day; the engineer necessarily do so every time he comes to the dock; the whistle sounds; he orders, is generally blown five minutes before the boat is due.

[illegible] Engineer, Before the Coroner and Inspectors—Report of the Experts.

The investigation into the cause of the explosion on board the ferry-boat Westfield was continued yesterday, in the United States Circuit Court-room, before the United States Steamboat Inspectors. ABRAM VAN DUZER, an engineer on the Staten Island Ferry, thought the gauge of the Westfield was out of order, and failed to indicate the exact pressure. MR. ANNING SMITH, Superintendent of the North-shore Staten Island Ferry, thought that the crack in the boiler weakened it so that twenty-seven pounds pressure would cause the explosion. MR. HENRY WHITTAKER, an engineer, considered that the explosion was caused by want of water. Mr. ROBERT CREUZBAUR'S theory was that the boiler exploded from differential expansion. The Committee of experts reported that the steam-gauge was correct between thirty-five and twenty-four pounds, but that below twenty-four the gauge indicated in excess of the pressure. The valve was found to work correctly and the tensile tests were satisfactory.

A passenger having been made on the boiler of the Middletown, of the Staten Island Ferry, and it being found in an unsafe condition, Assistant Inspector STRATTON directed that no more passengers should be carried on the boat until it was repaired. Accordingly, the Middletown was sent to the repair-shop yesterday, and will be thoroughly overhauled. The cylindrical portion of the boiler, near its junction with the furnace, was found to leak, and while the thirty-seven pounds hydrostatic pressure was on the boiler, holes were made in it with a hammer.

THE TESTIMONY YESTERDAY.

The following is the substance of the testimony taken yesterday:

The first witness was ABRAHAM VAN DUZER. He testified: I am an engineer, residing on Staten Island, and employed on the Staten Island Ferry-boats; I have been engineer on the Westfield; our pressure is generally twenty-five pounds on all the boats; we have five engineers for our boats; there are only two regular engineers on each boat; I have been employed for twenty-one years; I am the oldest engineer in connection with the line; each engineer takes a turn in inspecting the boats which are not running, and it is the duty of any repairs made they are made by the engineer who is off duty; examining the boats or boats which are not being used; we have done all the patching ourselves; other firms have a general contract; the boats we have in use have a pressure of twenty to twenty-five pounds of steam on all the boats; it is twenty months since I have been on the Westfield or any other of the ferry-boats, in connection of those on the accident; I have seen the Westfield since the explosion; I could not form any idea of the cause of the explosion; should have considered her quite safe with the steam as it said she had on at the time of the accident; I think it would have taken thirty to thirty-five pounds of steam to have caused the explosion, and I think there must have been somewhere near the vicinity of the cause of the explosion; I think the gauge was out of order, so that it did not record correct; I have known gauges to stop; I think the gauge would have indicated the correct pressure had it been in order; I was present when it was tested, and I am a licensed engineer; [document put in.] I was first licensed about sixteen years ago.

JAMES M. HIGGINSON testified: I am a ship-builder; I built the ferry-boat Westfield; she is 250 feet long on deck, 32 feet moulder, 13½ inches hips, 15 feet on the end; the shaft is about the centre of the boat, and the pilot-houses were equal distances from the two ends; the boiler was parallel; there were two water-tanks in the opposite ends of the boat; the wheel-beams were of a usual size; she had a very heavy frame; I built the Westfield by contract; I put in the cranks and deck-beams; I considered the Westfield as good a vessel as ever was built.

ANNING SMITH was sworn, and said: I am an engineer, and am at present Superintendent North Shore Staten Island Ferry; I've examined the Westfield since the explosion; I went on board of her a week ago last Monday; I found on the [illegible] from the [illegible] I examined [illegible] could find any thing [illegible] particular opening [illegible] day, the place [illegible] might have been [illegible] thought [illegible] pose, was damaged by the explosion; I have seen the piece of iron at Police Head-quarters, which in one place, shows a crack almost entirely through the iron; the crack was covered with a thin coating of iron; (the witness gave a lengthened explanation, describing the appearance and effect of the explosion;) I think the twenty-seven pounds of pressure would cause the explosion, in consequence of the previous crack; I have formed an opinion from observation and from the experiments which I have made; I have not upon the valve; there might have been only a thin piece of iron that covered the hole; I believe there was a hole in the bottom of the boiler as large as the size; and there is an increased pressure on the bottom of the boiler, because of the weight of water; [illegible] was considerable quantity of water in the boiler; the inside of the boiler looked good; it appeared since the explosion; I should say it was [illegible] perfectly safe to carry sixty pounds of steam.

MR. HENRY WHITTAKER was next sworn and testified: I am a steam engineer; I have been so for twenty-one years; I am employed by the Staten Island Ferry Company; I have charge of the boats; I was [illegible] on the Westfield on the day of the explosion; I was [illegible] boat; I was [illegible] the explosion; I was [illegible] the boat; I was [illegible] the explosion; I was [illegible] the boat; I was [illegible] the explosion; I was [illegible] the

The second story will be eighty feet to the top of the cornice, and there will be sixteen feet high, making altogether ninety-six feet above the level of the street. Return of the Seventy-Second Regiment.

After an enjoyable day's sojourn at New-Haven, Conn., the veteran battalion of the Seventy-second Regiment returned to the metropolis, arriving here yesterday morning. The members expressed unbounded thanks for the kind reception which they had met with from the citizens and various military organizations of New-Haven, who seemed to take special delight in entertaining their visitors. The festivities included a collation to the officers of the battalion by the city authorities, followed by a review on the Green by Gov. JEWELL, which was witnessed by crowds of spectators. Col. STEPHEN E. SMITH, of the Second Connecticut Regiment, commanded the troops, which consisted of the Second Regiment, Col. CUNNINGHAM, of the Sarsfield Guards; Capt. EMERY, and Lieut. JEROME, of the City Guards; and Lieut. VAYEL, of the Post Guards. After the review the procession passed through several of the principal streets, and then went through the ceremony of street parade before Capt. RICHARD BYRNE, commandant of the Twenty-second Regiment, with fireworks closing an executive officer. Later in the day a collation was given to the visitors by the New-Haven Grays and the Blues, at which Gov. JEWELL presided, assisted by Gov. Jewell, Col. Ramsay, Major McGRATH, Master-Sergeant and others. Col. JEWELL, in remarking that the Twenty-second Regiment had served a deserved reputation for good discipline and military conduct, (in the evening a promenade concert was given on the Green by Dodworth's Regimental Band. The excursionists took their departure for home at 11 P.M. On their way to the boat they stopped at Gen. Lewis' residence a few minutes and tendered him a serenade.

The Merrick Camp-Meeting.

The 36th annual meeting which has been in progress for the last seven days at Merrick, Long Island, for several days has exhibited several unusual attractions, both as regards numbers and variety of the entertaining company. There were probably more than 1,500 persons present yesterday, and even the early prayer-meeting at 6 o'clock was very largely attended. At 10 the regular morning service took place, which was conducted by quite a number of clergymen, and addresses were delivered about on the kinds of many of the listeners. The speakers stand is one that proves to very satisfactorily arranged, and the grounds generally have been so carefully determined that there is no difficulty in hearing the speaking even at a considerable distance; an impromptu meeting was held in the evening, very favorable in meetings of this kind. For the body in which the encampment is conducted, nothing but praise can be bestowed, if the boarding-tents are excepted, where it is said that there is often trouble in obtaining suitable food. The Executive Committee have made arrangements to supply persons coming to the camp-

[illegible] with tents, marquees, booths, tables, and all other necessary articles for the[illegible] notice during a brief period. Tents for the erection of tents is also given.

The evening meetings will continue [illegible] next Wednesday, and it is thought that the exercises by a number of conveyances will be unusually numerous.

The Sacred Pan-Hellenic.

From the Evening Post, Aug. 10.

We print today an account of the sine-curse upon recent pay-rolls of the City and county, taken from the New-York Times of this morning. These pay-rolls are certainly kept hidden up the Controller's office. They are the property of the people, and yet repeated and unjustifiable refusals to the patriot inspection of their contents have been denied. Any journal which can obtain information concerning them, from any source, is therefore justified in giving it to the public.

The details which are given by the Times are, that the story is substantially true is beyond all question. The grossest City Government that for many months enormous sums of the people's money is now rendered the people no service whatever. This form of corruption has been rendered possible by a system under which a mere majority of the electors can give or withhold political and personal support. We have given the details published today, to make it our duty to invite the Mayor HALL'S immediate attention to the great frauds of which he is the responsible chief; and it is the immediate publication of the pay-rolls in full. Let the people know who is calling or paying this money, and who of re-delivering it without rendering an equivalent. Full information of the facts by that time, and Controller will be a confession that the whole thing would not bear to be brought to light. The accusations already made, [illegible]

In publishing these facts, however, we do not assert that the abuses there exposed are all maintained at the present time. When the Board of Supervisors met to audit the accounts of the City and County for the month of January, 1871, it was found that hundreds of such claims were shortened in May and June last, and that the same [illegible] for July were made out, nearly all the names [illegible] Both of the authors of the old pay-rolls [illegible] Both of the authors of the old pay-rolls are to be buried under a reform administration. But the people must know the extent to which the fraud has been carried, the men who have committed it, and profited by it, the chances of recovering their money, and the extent of the reform that has been made.

There is one important part of these disclosures which we do not find referred to elsewhere, even to this day. The men who are named by the Times as connected with the Tweed ring and with several corporations, and the whole of what is known in political circles of this City as the personal staff of Mr. TWEED, still hold their sinecures, as we are assured, and draw every month the money which is due to them for the services which are not rendered. In the name of the people, we ask why these men have been excepted from a reform of which the City Government boasts that it is thorough and general? In their name, too, we demand the immediate publication of the pay-rolls as they were and as they are.

Meanwhile, we the every journal in the State of New-York, which values honest government, to publish these facts, to study them in detail, and to explain them to the people. Questions more probable every day, that the oppressed tax-payers of this City will have to appeal to the Legislature for relief from the burdens of taxation that this appeal will be the one issue in the general election of November. It is the Legislature that has loaned us hand and foot; it is the Legislature that must loose us from our bonds. Make sure we to the people every where how their representatives have given us over into unworthy hands; and they will select representatives who cannot be bought and sold, and who will administer this great trust as honest men and this dialogue in our State is but another name for [illegible]

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

The debate on the Ballot bill in the British House of Lords last night was vigorous, both sides using strong expressions. The Marquis of RIPON made some pleasant allusions to his recent visit to the United States, and spoke in complimentary terms of American institutions. The House divided on the measure, and the result was a majority of forty-nine against the bill. The authorities of Londonderry are taking precautions against disturbances on the 12th instant, the anniversary of the raising of the memorable siege in 1688. In the House of Commons, Mr. GLADSTONE stated that the Queen's departure for Balmoral had been postponed, and the date of prorogation therefore uncertain. Telegraph tolls are to be reduced to sixpence for ten words throughout the United Kingdom. Mr. CARDWELL, defending the British military system as compared with that of Prussia, said the latter was not suited to a free country like England. He predicted excellent results from the military manœuvres to take place in Berkshire, during the coming Autumn. A meeting is called for Sunday next in Hyde Park, for the purpose of uttering a protest against the prohibition by the Government of last Sunday's meeting in Dublin.

The motion to prolong M. THIERS' term of power will probably be offered in the French Assembly today. It will provide also for his resignation should the Assembly be dissolved before the term specified ends. The measure of indemnification met with such violent opposition from M. VICTOR LEFRANC that it was not acted on. The Versailles Court-martial has sentenced M. ROCHEFT, ex-Mayor of Puteaux, to penal servitude for life. The Communist prisoners complain bitterly of the comments of the journals on their cases. Affairs continue to improve in Algeria. A brilliant victory over the insurgents is reported at West Sebel.

Robberies have become so frequent at Havana that general arrests of suspicious characters have been resorted to by the Police.

The soap-works of JOHN HARBERLE, St. John-street, Philadelphia, MATTHEW HUMMEL'S morocco-dressing works, and ten dwellings were burned, and ten dwellings and a number of buildings were injured by fire yesterday. The total loss is $30,000. Most of the buildings were uninsured.

The Fall Election—What Will the Anti-Tammany Democracy of the City Do?

The time has already arrived for the preliminary movements of politicians in regard to the Fall election. According to the usual custom, the State Conventions of both parties should assemble early in September. Although there is no Governor or members of Congress to be elected this year, and the officers to be nominated on the State ticket are of minor importance, yet the Fall campaign cannot fail to be an interesting and exciting one from the fact that the new Senate, to be elected this year, will participate in the election of a United States Senator in 1873, and from the still more important fact that the Democratic Party of the State will be forced to show its hand, and take some action relative to the present condition of the "Ring"-ridden Democracy of this City. As we have before intimated, the respectable leaders of the Democratic Party of the State—men like HORATIO SEYMOUR, SANDFORD E. CHURCH, SAMUEL J. TILDEN, and FRANCIS KERNAN—cannot afford to go into another State Convention and act the part of submissive tools of TWEED, SWEENY, CONNOLLY, HALL and O'GORMAN. Nor can they afford to adjourn the Convention, even if they are allowed to have their own way in it—as they doubtless will be this year, since the ticket to be nominated is of minor consequence—without distinctly repudiating all further alliance with the corrupt Tammany Ring that has made the name of New-York Democracy a by-word throughout the Union. There will be an Anti-Tammany contesting delegation from this City to the next State Convention, as there was to the last; and it will not do to ignore it in the way it was ignored last year. It will go this year reinforced by the great bulk of the German vote of the City, as well as by all that portion of the Irish and American vote that is not controlled by "Ring" patronage; and to deny it admission, or refuse to examine its credentials, as was done last year, will be to annihilate the Democratic Party in both City and State. It will not do for the Hay-loft and Cheese-press Democracy to rely, in future, on "Boss" TWEED'S promise to roll up "eighty-thousand majority" in this City for the ticket. That trick can no longer be played. Any ticket nominated by a Convention which excludes the delegates representing the real Democracy of the City, and admits only the creatures of the Ring, is doomed to defeat.

Meantime what action do the Democratic opponents of the Tammany Hall oligarchy propose to take with regard to the situation in this City? Now is the time for them to organize; anti-Tammany clubs should be formed in every Ward and District, and preparations made for a vigorous campaign this Fall. The Ring, to be sure, have taken from the popular vote every office which the Constitution of the State would allow them to take; but there still remains to be elected this Fall a Register of the County, five Senators, and twenty-one members of the Assembly. There is little doubt that, by proper effort, a majority of Senators and Assemblymen can be elected in opposition to Tammany Hall. The World, speaking in the interest of the "Ring," takes special pains to impress upon the public the idea that it is useless to attempt to make any change in the present "Ring" charter before 1873. Assuming to speak for Gov. HOFFMAN, it announces, in advance, that he will veto any attempt to change the present form of the City Government. Now it is by no means certain, after what has occurred during the last month, that Gov. HOFFMAN would refuse to sign a bill that wrested power from the hands of HALL, TWEED, SWEENY and CONNOLLY and restored it to the people; but even if he were to be so blind to his own interests and future prospects, there is such a thing as overruling the Governor's veto by a two-thirds vote; and this two-thirds vote can be easily obtained by electing the right kind of men to the Legislature from this City. In the present temper of the rural Democracy, their representatives in the Legislature would be only too glad to join the members from this City in any legislation designed to overthrow the Tammany Ring; and Gov. HOFFMAN would hardly venture to put himself in the position of sole defender of a corrupt clique which had been repudiated by the entire Democratic Party of the State. The honest Democracy of the City should, therefore, devote all their energies in the coming election to securing an anti-Tammany delegation to the next Legislature. The "Ring" will soon commence laying their pipe, and pulling their wires to secure their usual victory in the Fall election; but they will have to work against fearful odds this time; every reputable citizen, every honest man will be against them, and it will only require a fair election and an impartial count of the votes to secure their defeat by an overwhelming majority.

"The Coming Race."

The sensation produced in England by the new book entitled the Coming Race—just republished here by F. B. FELT & CO.—seems somewhat disproportioned to its merits. The work is, no doubt, entitled to be numbered among the minor curiosities of literature, but in the main it is a disappointing book. The author is evidently a Tory by conviction, a man possessing remarkable literary gifts, great humor, and a strong talent for sarcasm. He has produced a work almost as fantastic in its way as Vathek, but of a higher character; a work in which most of the political and social systems of the day are quietly ridiculed, but which fails to introduce anything very much better to the notice or imitation of mankind. His "coming race" must be a very uncomfortable sort of people to live among, and the earth, with all its faults, is superior to the region which the "Vril-ya" inhabit. It is the old story—when discontented man sits down and tries to plan a better world than this, he fails.

The author—whose style is like that of ARTHUR HELPS, but whose politics are those of Lord LYTTON, and one or other of those two men, we are inclined to think, wrote the book—does his preaching under the disguise of a story. An American descends a mine, and by a strange adventure finds himself suddenly among a new and wonderful people, living far below the surface of the earth. The buildings are huge and striking; the people are tall, handsome, and provided with wings; the streets and landscapes are lit with an artificial, but pleasing, light; the grass is not green, but red or brown; and, chief peculiarity of all, a new force supplies the place of all other forces known to us in this world. It destroys and heals, it can rend mountains asunder, destroy cities, overcome all the agencies known to mankind. "I should call it electricity," says the author, "except that it comprehends in its manifold branches other forces of nature, to which, in our scientific nomenclature, differing names are assigned, such as magnetism, galvanism, &c." The name of it is Vril and a little of it in a rod held by a child could instantly destroy cities as large as New-York or London. People go to sleep and learn languages under the influence of vril—decidedly an improvement on the "Oldenduff" system, or any other system known to us backward mortals. The people who have attained to the knowledge of "vril" have naturally a great contempt for the forms of government in existence on earth—especially for all democratic forms. Among themselves, the good of the community is the first and last end striven for. There is no crime among them, no Courts of justice, no lawyers. People do as they like, and as they never wish to injure each other, there is no unhappiness.

The condition of the female sex among the Vril-ya may be confidently commended to the notice of Mr. THEODORE TILTON. The females enjoy all that is included here under the title of "woman's rights," but then they are more powerful physically than men—taller, with larger thews and muscles, and gifted with superior skill in the use of will. The females are called Gy-ai—Gy in the singular—and they seem to have some qualities in common with their sex on earth. Thus it is a proverb among them that their sex is "soft in the concrete, but hard to deal with in the individual." The girls are more cruel than the boys. Here, however, the superficial resemblance to earthly woman ceases. No Gy has killed her husband for upward of two thousand years. They have the privilege of wooing, while the men must wait to be wooed. Sometimes a female "develops a slight mustache mould ago"—but that has been known to happen here. The people have a religion, and "whatever may be said against it, at least it has these strange peculiarities: Firstly, that they all believe in the creed they profess; secondly, that they all practice the precepts which the creed inculcates." In these respects, man cannot afford to place himself in comparison with the "coming race." Many of their social customs are superior to our own. Take, for instance, the way in which they deal with an improvident person:

"We regard him as an unfortunate person of unsound reason, and place him, at the expense of the State, in a public building, where every comfort and every luxury that can mitigate his affliction are lavished upon him. But an An does not like to be considered out of his mind, and therefore such cases occur so seldom that the public building I speak of is now a deserted ruin, and the last inmate of it was an An whom I recollect to have seen in my childhood. He did not seem conscious of loss of reason, and wrote glaum, (poetry.)"

The sly cut at the poets in this passage is an example of the way in which the author deals with many other classes held in high esteem on earth—statesmen, philosophers, men of science. One of the happiest hits of sarcasm in the book is that which is aimed at Mr. DARWIN and his followers. It appears that the Vril-ya (or Ans, Ans being the plural of An) have a tradition that they were all descended from frogs. One of the Coming Race thus describes the theory:

"Pardon me," answered Aph-Lin, "in what we call the Wrangling or Philosophical Period of History, which was at its height about seven thousand years ago, there was a very distinguished naturalist, who proved to the satisfaction of numerous disciples such analogical and anatomical agreements in structure between an An and a Frog as to show that out of the one must have developed the other. They had some diseases in common; they were both subject to the same parasitical worms in the intestines; and, strange to say, the An has, in his structure, a swimming-bladder, no longer of any use to him, but which is a rudiment that clearly proves his descent from a Frog. Nor is there any argument against this theory to be found in the relative difference of size, for there are still existent in our world Frogs of a size and stature not inferior to our own, and many thousand years ago they appear to have been still larger."

In the following passage Mr. DARWIN'S monkey theory is closely parodied:

"Again, the earlier races of the Ana seem to have been covered with hair, and, even to a comparatively recent date, hirsute bushes deformed the very faces of our ancestors, spreading wild over their cheeks and chins, as similar bushes, my poor Tish, spread wild over yours. But the object of the higher races of the Ana through countless generations has been to erase all vestige of connection with hairy vertebrata, and they have gradually eliminated that debasing capillary excrement by the law of sexual selection; the Gy-ai naturally preferring youth or the beauty of smooth faces. But the degree of the Frog in the scale of the vertebrata is shown in this, that he has no hair at all, not even on his head. He was born to that hairless perfection which the most beautiful of the Ana, despite the culture of incalculable ages, have not yet attained."

Whether the author of this curious book had any serious purpose in view, or merely wished to amuse himself and bewilder the public, is not quite clear. We wish he could have explained the composition of Vril, for a good supply of that article would be very useful in these upper regions. Unfortunately, a Gy fell in love with him, and then a second Gy appeared as a rival, and between them both his restoration to this world was accomplished. Thus we are left in ignorance of the constituents of a force which might enable us to live in perfect happiness for about 130 years, and be kept well in hand all the time by the Gy-ai, or females of our kind.

A Backwoods Murder.

The supposition that rural life is synonymous with innocence and peace, is, like other imaginative delusions, becoming rapidly dispelled. Amid the quiet and balmy freshness of a backwoods settlement of the Province of Ontario, there has lately occurred a tragedy whose details give such glimpses of reckless avarice, unholy passion, and desperate hate as the criminal records of great cities cannot surpass. Early on the morning of July 15, the inhabitants of the village of Nissouri, Middlesex County, Ontario, were startled by the news of a brutal murder which had taken place the previous night in the log cabin of GEORGE CAMPBELL, who owned a farm on the edge of the adjoining backwoods. The spectacle that awaited the neighbors who first chanced to pass CAMPBELL'S residence on that morning was as follows: Mrs. CAMPBELL, a plump, fresh-colored, blue-eyed, and motherly-looking woman, was quietly sitting at the door, ready to tell the first comer a fearful tale of treachery and blood. Inside the cottage two or three young children were wailing, unheeded by their mother, and in a little bed-room upstairs the father and husband was lying with battered skull and throat fearfully gashed—a hideously defaced corpse. Mrs. CAMPBELL related with wonderful coolness, and an occasional approach to flippancy, how, quietly sleeping with her husband and infant of nine months old, she was awakened by the noise of blows, and found her husband springing out of bed to grapple with two masked assassins, who very quickly overpowered him. The heavy thuds of an ax upon the head of her husband were calmly described by this remarkable woman, and a well-connected though somewhat improbable story was given in order to explain her subsequent inaction, and the absence of any tracks of the flight of the murderers.

For three weeks the detectives continued to grope after the connecting links of this terrible crime. They shortly discovered that the murder had been merely the last step of a series of guilty deeds. CAMPBELL'S wife had maintained a criminal intimacy with a young field laborer called THOMAS KOYLE. She and her husband had, in consequence, lived on the most disagreeable terms. CAMPBELL was a man of patient, long-suffering temperament; his wife, whose maiden name was MCWAIN, was come of a sullen, passionate race, and, despite the mildness expressed in her countenance, was a woman of quick temper, and when aroused, of ungovernable passion. In addition to these potent causes of disagreement, the MCWAINS and the CAMPBELLS had family causes of difference, and the murdered man is said to have been the creditor of his wife's friends to a considerable amount. Both Mrs. CAMPBELL and her paramour, KOYLE, were indicted as being accessory to the murder. On Saturday last, shortly after her arrest, Mrs. CAMPBELL submitted the first of a series of confessions relating to the crime with which she is charged. In this statement, sworn to before the Crown Attorney, she states that on the fatal night she was awakened by her husband calling out; that she heard some one strike him, and felt spatters of blood after the blow. A knife and a hatchet had been placed over night near the foot of the bed, and after getting out to struggle with his murderous assailant, her husband called to her to get him the knife. A voice which she knows to be that of THOMAS KOYLE, said, "don't fetch it here, or I'll murder you too." The struggle was soon over, and after striking CAMPBELL with an ax, as he lay on the floor, KOYLE explained, in reply to a question from Mrs. CAMPBELL, "we had a fuss, and I always said I would have my revenge." After inducing Mrs. CAMPBELL, by threats, to wait some hours before giving the alarm, KOYLE went away.

This story received but a very limited degree of credit. If it was true in any point, it was generally believed to be only a part of the truth. Accordingly when on Tuesday, Mrs. CAMPBELL came out with an entirely different story, it was merely accepted as another contribution toward the whole truth, which is still believed to be in reserve. The latest statement of the accused woman, which was elicited in conversation with her father, is to the effect that since being in prison, she has been twice visited by the ghost of her deceased husband. "GEORGE'S spirit," as she describes the apparition, took her by the hand and told her to clear the poor boy below, (meaning KOYLE,) and to tell who actually took his life. In obedience to this ghostly summons, Mrs. CAMPBELL was moved to state that whatever faults KOYLE may have had, "he really did not make away with GEORGE!" The real culprit she stated, was her cousin, JOHN MCWAIN, with whose wife, it was hinted, the deceased CAMPBELL had been on terms of improper intimacy. She further alleged that "the night before the job was done," her cousin had come in and talked about her husband having money hid about the house, stating, at the same time, that he would like to have some of it. About 12 o'clock MCWAIN came softly upstairs, and on hearing his approach, Mrs. CAMPBELL, who had previously left the door open, went out on the landing to meet him. A candle was procured, and the pair went to search for the concealed money. While so engaged, CAMPBELL awoke, and asked "what sort of work this was?" Seizing an ax, MCWAIN struck him till he moved no longer, and the faithless wife, who had held the candle while her husband was being murdered, proceeded to put a blanket over the children to stifle the noise which they had begun to make on hearing the disturbance. MCWAIN told Mrs. CAMPBELL to say that KOYLE did it, threatening her that if she mentioned him he would kill her too. It would be useless to attempt to unravel a mystery which, in a few days, will probably be fully disclosed by the woman whose mind is at present in the stage when imposture gives place to self-delusion. As it stands, the details and accessories of the tragedy are revolting enough to give as a horrible prominence among contemporary crimes.

Cheap Excursions.

Among the wants of the day there is one which should no longer remain unsupplied. We refer to the popular demand for cheap excursions, by railroad and steam-boat, under a system which shall permit a reasonably extended trip to points of interest, and, at the same time, allow of quiet journeying. Time was, some twenty years ago, when something of the kind was tried in New-England by a person named PERHAM, who ran immense excursion-trains into Boston from the neighboring towns at half fare, and brought thousands of rural visitors to the City. But these were comparatively short excursions, lasting only a single day, and including but limited means of enjoyment. They were sufficiently popular, however, to be profitable to their manager and to the railroads which encouraged the project.

But we need something on a more liberal scale than this. The wealthy class can wander at their own sweet will, and linger long, if they so desire, at the various watering-places and fashionable places of resort. To them, expense is a matter of small account, and their time is their own. But in behalf of the less fortunate classes, who have little leisure and less money, we invite the aid of some shrewd manager who will arrange a cheap system of travel, by which a great many places can be visited for a reasonable sum of money, and without the usual discomforts of hurried journeys.

Why, for instance, may there not be excursions to carry our citizens on trips of one, two, or three hundred miles around New-York, to occupy a week, a fortnight, or even a month in time—to extend as far as Niagara on the west, Washington on the south, the St. Lawrence on the north, and Boston on the east, and upon a scale of fares within the reach of a moderately-filled purse? We shall be told, probably, that the railroad and steam-boat "kings" stand in the way. But this is scarcely a fair thing to say, since no attempt has been made by a responsible organization to arrange a system of cheap sight-seeing for the million. It is not easy to believe that railway officials are so blind to their real interests as to thwart a rational scheme of popularizing travel. Once organized, the project would attract very great patronage, and it would come for the most part from that portion of the community to which travel is an exceptional experience. The issue of tickets to cover a specific but varying route, at half fare or thereabouts, would be an easy experiment, and one well worth trying. Of course, it would be necessary that a single ticket should pass its owner over several lines of road, so that he need not return by the same route on which he set out, and might thus be enabled to see all that was worth seeing. But there need be no difficulty about this if the proper manager undertook the arrangement of the details, and the companies lent it their support.

By the introduction here of such a system as they have elsewhere, a New-Yorker could take his family up the Hudson by boat, as far as Niagara by rail, thence back by the Erie Road, stopping wherever he chose en route at greatly reduced fares, up to the date specified in his contract; and similar trips might be enjoyed in other directions. Much might be seen on such a trip as this, and eagerly would the opportunity be improved. Under such a system, thousands would cheerfully transfer to the railroad companies, steam-boats, and hotels for a single week's excursion, the money they now expend through all the season for the equivocal pleasure of fighting mosquitoes in the so-called rural suburbs of our City; and, at the same time, they would return refreshed, physically and mentally, for their business life.

Shall Railway Murderers be Punished?

That the last railway murder in Maine was less fatal than the similar slaughter in Tennessee a week or two ago, is in no respect due to the Directors of the Maine Central Road. They appear to have omitted no possible carelessness which could contribute to the slaying and mangling of their unhappy passengers. The bridge which broke under the weight of the train was so rotten as to make it wonderful that the accident had not occurred long ago. Nor was this unknown by the Company. But, with that deliberation which characterizes corporations when so slight a matter as the security of the public is at stake, they had begun on the very day of the accident "to haul up new timbers to replace the old." So the telegraph briefly states this evidence of the imbecility or criminal carelessness of the officers of the Maine Central Railroad. The timbers of a bridge do not decay so as to become insecure in a day's time, or in a week, or in a month.

For as much as a year, perhaps, this bridge has been unsafe, liable at any moment to break, and to plunge a hundred unsuspecting human beings into instant death or agonizing torture. The Company knew this. They have not even the pitiful excuse of ignorance to screen their inefficiency. Yet they made no move to prevent the accident, which was certain to come, until it actually did come, and then we are told that they had just begun to make preparations to repair their rotten bridge.

This culpable neglect of duty would be astounding, if it were not plainly fostered by the equally culpable failure of the public and the ministers of the law to enforce on passenger carriers their just responsibility. Every week or so this same thing happens; for the last two months similar accidents have averaged one a week. Yet, after the first brief spasm of excitement and horror, the public mind sinks back into that amazing apathy which, with us, appears to be its normal state. No Grand Jury presents these official murderers, no public prosecutor dreams of indicting them. The very victims of their negligence do not in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred sue them for the damages which they would almost inevitably gain. On the Hudson a hundred lives were each time endangered, and probably double that number of persons were crippled or hurt in various painful ways, because the owners of the vessel chose to save money by employing incompetent servants and by using a defective boiler. Has any suit been begun on behalf of those hundred victims, or will there be? In the accident on the Harpeth River, by the breaking of a rotten bridge, between fifty and a hundred persons were killed or wounded. We do not hear that any actions have been begun on their behalf, nor is it likely there will be. And so with the last massacre in Maine. We shall hear much blaster about investigation and punishment, but we know that the result will be the same sickening verdict of nobody to blame. Next week, or some other week, there will be another railway murder, and another momentary burst of indignation. Railway directors will snap their fingers and pocket their dividends, the dead and wounded will be swept away, and lethargy once more will stifle justice.

Is there to be no end to this? Will private citizens never learn that, apart from any selfish consideration, on each of them devolves a sacred duty, for which they will surely be held responsible before God, if not before man, to bring public malefactors to justice whenever it is in their power? If for every person injured in a railroad or steam-boat accident legal redress should be resolutely enforced, and no compromise listened to, such disasters would soon grow less frequent than they are. The traveling public and the authorities are really as much to blame as the more immediate criminals. They are virtually accessories both before and after the fact. These things we have insisted on so often that their repetition is tiresome and disheartening. Yet the evil work goes on, as it will continue to go on, until railway and steam-boat owners are held to a strict personal and pecuniary accountability for every such cruel destruction of human life.

MINOR TOPICS.

We imagine that no possible amount of self-contradiction of which the World could now be capable would surprise anybody. We quote the following merely to show how unnecessary it is to enter into controversy with that journal, since in a few days after taking up a certain line of argument it is perfectly certain to demolish it of its own accord by saying something flatly contradicting its previous statements:

The World, Aug. 9.

The fact that in many parts of our country a habit has grown up during the past decade, under the law-despising domination of the Ring and Fenry, of neglecting this duty (of publishing City expenditures) on the one hand and of withholding this right (of inspecting them) on the other, could not for a moment be permitted or to be pleaded in extenuation of similar official misconduct or similar popular laches in this great Democratic metropolis. If the City Government had ever any mind to withhold the right there would be more provocation than now exists to the performance of the duty to which a number of gentlemen invite the fuller citizens by a card convening a meeting at the Academy of Music "to take the necessary steps for a thorough examination of the public accounts." The most necessary step to such an examination is the publication of the accounts in question. This step, the Mayor informs us, is now taking; and no person whose character and capacity entitle him to be considered fit to undertake will care to compromise his reputation or his self-respect by proceeding to an inquest before the subject of the inquest has been submitted to him.

The World, Aug. 10.

Now it must be very clear from these repeated and unquestioned facts that a thorough examination is precisely what the committee of the Republican Party of legislators in this City do not want. They clamor continually for the publication of the accounts, as if every man did not know that these would at once be followed by the cry of fraud, and by the demand for "evidence" of the various official corruptions. The facts we have stated must make it clear to the intelligence of every reader that the purpose of the Committee of Fifty in these charges is political; that they are not made in the interest of economy, or of reform, or of good government. When the conviction fully obtains in the public mind—and it is, by the weight of the facts we have recited, rapidly approaching that complexion—the force of the Republican party will become dissipated long before the original charges can be brought to a practical issue. We shall regret, heartily regret, such an important conclusion.

The World's "regret—heartily regret" over its premature discovery that the charges are likely to "blow over" is exceedingly good. Nor is it less amusing to watch the desperate attempts of this bewildered organ to make itself worth the Corporation pay which is very uselessly expended on it.

The Evening Mail, one of the most popular of our City papers, is entering very earnestly into the task of endeavoring to secure political reform. A sensible, and at the same time moderate, article appeared in its columns yesterday, and we republish it this morning. It points out the impossibility of the City authorities continuing to evade the charges brought against them. It expresses the general feeling of the public when it demands the real accounts from the Controller, and not financial "exhibits" which are absolutely meaningless. The Mail, by taking this honest position, will strengthen itself in the esteem of its supporters, and increase its claim to be regarded as a faithful public journal.

How deeply the sense of the reverses of France has affected the minds of the best thinkers of that country, is shown by a recent article in the Revue des Deux Mondes on China. The Revue, with all its candor and impartiality, has never failed to represent the excessive pride of the French in their influence on foreign affairs; and that pride has shown itself with peculiar distinctness in the treatment of China. With very slight commercial interests, France has been foremost in asserting the claims of the Western nations to enter China for trade and for purposes of religious proselytism. Now, with the outrage and insult of the Tien-tsin massacre, still inadequately atoned for, the Revue recommends a pure "policy of abstention," leaving French merchants to share the lot of other foreigners, and French missionaries to take care of themselves. Considering the extreme energy with which France, under the Empire, insisted on protecting all her missionaries everywhere in the Celestial Kingdom, and on treating all converts as entitled also to the protection of French Consulate Courts, there is something amusing in the frankness with which the Revue writer remarks: "We will not wrong our missionaries by believing that they can go forward only under the shadow of the French flag!"

Is it utterly useless to call the attention of public authorities in this City to abuses that disturb the public comfort, and threaten directly the public health? The condition of the streets about our public markets grows more horrible every day. It is, for instance, a task which nobody undertakes, except with disgust, to pass by Fulton Market on either of its four sides. And yet, along the Fulton-street and South-street sides, there are daily probably more people pass every day than by any other point in the City. They are compelled to endure the sight and smell of mountains of offensive refuse, from decaying fish to rotten fruit, which are thrown into the gutters, or into barrels on the curb-stones, or on the sidewalks. Is Dr. Smith a member of the City Government with a nose? If so, let him go near Washington or Fulton Markets, and he will find that he could not get his way through the foul smells with a knife.

There are no places capable of being made more attractive and enjoyable than the slopes on Brooklyn Heights at the termini of the ferry streets. They are five in number, and they overlook the Bay and the City of New-York and the opposite Highlands of New-Jersey. Any afternoon and early evening, were they accessible, they would be the resort of hundreds. This was the view taken by the public when, a few years since, the improvement at these places was demanded. In response to that demand, a Commission was appointed. Curiously enough it was found to control almost entirely of residents of the Heights, who, jealous of their seclusion, coolly proceeded instead of opening to close up these places by high iron railings. Against these railings every hot evening the people for whose benefit the "parks" were supposed to be, press their faces or huddle along the stone bases. The pretense for this arrangement is that the crowds that would gather were the parks open, would misbehave themselves. It does not occur to those who urge this opposition that the places might be closed after dark, and that Police attendance would at all times be very easily and cheaply supplied.

We invite attention to the statement published elsewhere of the views of the persons who propose a "Labor Party" for the next Presidential campaign. If these views were really shared by the mass of laboring men of the country, it would be worth while to point out several points in regard to which they are utterly impracticable and confused, as well as others on which they are sensible. They are, however, purely experimental in their nature. A half dozen persons think it would be a good thing for the laboring men of the country to control directly the National Government, and think, also, and sincerely, that in that case the poor could be made wealthy and the wretched put at ease. So they issue a manifesto containing their nostrums for the universal disease, and are going to see who will take them.

The question whether a manufacturer shall have the privilege of annoying the residents of a neighborhood by noises in his factory during working hours, is now under consideration by Judge MONROE, of Cincinnati. It comes from an application for a temporary injunctive order, made by a Mr. GAILLAT against a Mr. CLEMENTS. On examination, Mr. GAILLAT stated that he had erected a dwelling-house in a locality specially adapted for private residences; and that Mr. CLEMENTS had recently removed his business of manufacturing iron-work for prisons, to a shop just opposite his. Mr. GAILLAT—house, where the workmen make such a noise in nailing sheet-iron on a smooth wooden surface, as to destroy the peace of himself and family, and render life almost insupportable. Several of Mr. GAILLAT'S neighbors give testimony in corroboration, and add, further, that frequent fires were once prevented, and an engine sole broken up, in consequence of the frightful din, which completely drowned the voices of both clergymen and auctioneer. Mr. CLEMENTS made an attempt to prove that his shop was not a nuisance, by submitting the affidavit of a saloon-keeper, whose business would be likely to profit by the presence of a number of workmen. At this case may be made a precedent for the removal of other factories of a similar kind, the Judge's decision will prove an important one.

There are now lying at the various piers on the North and East Rivers nearly one hundred and fifty vessels, whose long, graceful hulls and rounded sterns at once proclaim their American origin. All fly a foreign ensign, a fact which attests the esteem in which the American shipbuilder and his perfect model is held abroad. Is it not about time that his claims were equally well appreciated at home? Ship-building is not yet a lost art among us, though there seems to be imminent danger that it shortly will be.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Dolby Ballad Concerts will begin at Steinway Hall on Oct. 9, and will continue throughout the week following that date.... Miss MARIA MENZES, the German lady whom Mr. THOMAS was to have introduced to the local public as his solo pianist, will not visit America this year. Mr. THOMAS has engaged in her stead Miss MARIE KRESS, while Miss ANNA MEHLIG will be the star pianist at the best miscellaneous concerts in and out of town.... Miss PHILHARMONIC Tamberlik is in Baltimore increasing an already large and varied repertory of orthodox violin tunes.... Mr. S. B. MILLS is passing the Summer in the Catskill Mountains.... The Friday evening concert at Terrace Garden to-night is to be especially brilliant.

Nineteenth Assembly District Republican Association.

The Nineteenth Assembly District Republican association, which was organized under direction of the State Central Committee, held their first meeting on Wednesday evening at their head-quarters, Eighty-fourth-street and Eighth-avenue, DAVID CRAMER, Esq., President in the chair. CHAS. F. BRUDER, Secretary. The attendance was large. CHAS. H. RITCHELL offered the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we are in favor of an honest and economical administration of City affairs; and that we are opposed to that class of Republicans who openly or secretly aid and abet Tammany Hall.

Resolved, That we heartily indorse the action of the Times in its fearless exposure of the corruptions of Tammany Hall politicians, its earnest hatred for the perpetrator of all kinds of fraud.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted. The President then announced the Executive and other Committees. Short speeches were made by C. H. RITCHELL, D. CLARKE, THOMAS HAGAN and others. A large number joined the Association, and the meeting then adjourned to meet the second Monday in September.

Personal.

Mr. MATTHEW MCDOUGALL, the newly-appointed Consul at Dundee, is a native of Scotland, and a resident of this City for the last thirty years, where he has carried on business in partnership with HUGH GARDNER, Esq. In choosing him, the President has selected an honest, able man, and one fitted by education and business experience for the position. It is a high compliment to Mr. MCDOUGALL that he returns to his birth-place as the representative of his adopted country, and creditable to the President that he has secured his services.

SOMETHING TO BE REMEMBERED.

In the TIMES of July 20 we explained some of the peculiarities in the manner of keeping the accounts of the Controller's Department, and showed that there are several different heads under which the same charge might be entered. We explained the difference between checks drawn on "special account" and checks drawn on account of appropriation, and referred to the manner of paying out moneys on those two accounts as follows:

"The usual mode of procedure with certain accounts is to draw a sufficient number of warrants to exhaust the appropriation in a few days, and then to draw on 'special account' as occasion requires."

It will be understood that the few days to which we alluded, in which certain appropriations are exhausted, are the few days immediately after these appropriations are made, and hence it will be found that the payments during a single month in the Spring or early Summer (immediately after the appropriations are made) are almost equal to the total payments for the remainder of the year. The appropriations for the present year were made late in May, and it is known that during the first week in June more than half a million dollars was paid to INGERSOLL, GARVEY, KEYSER and MILLER, for repairs and furniture for armories alone; while proportionally large amounts were paid out of other appropriations during the same period. No sooner has the great bulk of the different appropriations been disposed of in the manner described than Mayor HALL announces his intention to publish a monthly statement, showing the amounts drawn from the Treasury for the preceding month; but he commences with the month of July, after all the appropriations have been nearly exhausted, and is as dumb as an oyster about the millions that have been paid out during the month of June.

Inconclusive and absurd as the "statement" for July unquestionably is, with its array of "continuencies" and "other accounts," it makes a pretense of showing that only a few hundred thousand have been stolen during the month; whereas, if they had published a "statement" for the month of June, it would have shown that the amount similarly disposed of would have reached several millions.

The Herald and the World, in their efforts to shield the men whom we have arraigned for the gross abuse of the trust confided to them, have not scrupled to misrepresent the facts, and to endeavor to make it appear that all the moneys paid out were paid before the new City Government was inaugurated; and they have reiterated the statement that the figures we have published had been previously embodied in the published report of the "Proceedings of the Board of Supervisors for 1870," and that they had been long since published and commented on by these journals. Those statements were persisted in with a full knowledge of all the facts, and after they had all our figures before them. To show their utter falsity, it is only necessary to refer to the following table, compiled from the TIMES' supplement of the 20th ultimo.

Add to this the $3,804,207 15 drawn on special account during the three months ending March 31, 1871, and divided among the same parties, and we have an aggregate of paid by HALL and CONNOLLY during the first nine months that the new charter has been in operation.

Will it Blow Over?

From the Evening Mail.

If the Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad should be permanently charged with extravagance of expenditure and corrupt management, and should respond to a demand of the shareholders for information as to the affairs of the Company in 1869 and 1870, by giving a report of the receipts and expenses for the past three months, the Courts would soon be besieged for compulsory proceedings on the part of stockholders, the securities of the Company would depreciate, and the Directors would find themselves in hot water.

But they would, in such a case, only follow the example of our City authorities, who are fast losing the support of even their old party friends, because of their impudent and evasive replies to charges affecting the good name and credit of the City. Such protracted and ill-advised defiance of public opinion and contempt for the demands of tax-payers cannot much longer continue without bringing other results than the condemnation and disgrace of the offenders. It will seriously endanger the fabulous unsullied credit of our City in the money markets of the world. In Berlin, we hear this morning, the Exchange has refused to allow our City securities to appear in the official list. What has been done there is likely to be done in the other capitals of the Old World, unless our rulers frankly and fairly meet the general demand of tax-payers for information as to where their money has gone.

The unwise and audacious refusenique, and this persistent evasion of the real questions which affect all classes of the community, are fatal to all confidence, even the most charitable or the wildest suspicions as to official misconduct, and prepare the public mind to accept without reservation the new and astounding disclosures made by the TIMES to-day of enormous sums of money paid to minor officials, who did little or nothing for the pay they are receiving.

According to this showing there is paid annually in salaries—exclusive of those received by the Judges—the astounding amount of $413,000 to the clerks and other officials employed in the new Court-house. By the same statement the Chief Clerk of the Board of Supervisors (Controller), Mr. CHARLES G. TILLINGHAST, receives from various sinecure positions, which he holds under the City Government, about $20,000 a year, while the Secretary of the same Board, Mr. CORNELIUS GORMAN, receives $12,000 a year. The details of this remarkable exhibit occupy two columns and a half of the TIMES, and are incapable of such condensed statement as we have been able to print; but from the facts we have given the character of the whole disclosure may be judged.

We have no time or space to-day for anything more than the ample expression of our belief that such statements as this must be efficiently met, or else the already strong and swelling wave of public indignation will become an overwhelming current. This is a sort of popular feeling which blows up several persons we could name, but it is not going to "blow over" until the last secret of the City accounts is unearthed and the last perpetrator of frauds punished.

BUDD'S LAKE.

A Charming and Healthy Resort—Common Sense the Rule—Fishing and Pedestrian Explorations.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FOREST HOUSE, BUDD'S LAKE, N. J., }
Thursday, Aug. 10, 1871. }

This is not, I believe, one of the "fast and fashionable" places of resort of which New-Jersey can boast; but it is certainly one of the healthiest and most charming. Young ladies do not come here to show off their dresses, or to carry on inflammatory flirtations, or to spend the day in bed and the night in dancing. For such flighty-headed persons as these, Budd's Lake would probably have few attractions. But if you are in search of health and rest; if you want to spend a few days, or weeks, in the midst of lovely scenery, good pure air, and secure from extreme of heat, you could scarcely find a better spot than this. It is wonderful to see how the children thrive here. They can be out-of-doors all day without the slightest danger. They are brown, and healthy, run about from morning till night, and keep good hours—as, indeed, most of us do, except on Saturday, when the arrivals from town keep the place in a bustle. There has not been an uncomfortably warm day here this Summer, and even of last year the same thing might have been said.

The hotel is on high ground, in the midst of trees. That part of the Schooley range stands a little higher than the hotel, known as "Schooley Mountains," and it is infinitely more attractive. Just below the grove in front of Mr. SHARPE'S house is the lake—a beautiful sheet of water. In the bosom of exquisitely-wooded hills. On this lake there is capital fishing to be had—pickerel, perch, cat-fish, and black-bass. The boatman, "Jake," knows every inch of the lake, and is a capital companion to go out fishing with—good-tempered, patient and obliging, addicted to absurdly low charges for his boats. He never comes home from fishing without a good show of pickerel in the boat. He has the secret of enticing the fish to his line, even when another line from the same boat catches nothing. For ladies who like a quiet row, no place could be more suitable than Budd's Lake. The scenery seems always fresh and varied, and the air will put roses on the palest cheek if the fair visitor will only stay long enough. The drives round the country are among the prettiest I have ever seen. You can go any distance you like, and wherever you go the country is lovely. For my own part, I much prefer to "tramp it," believing that one can see more of the country, and get more health, by going about on "shanks' pony" than on anybody else's. The walk from here to Flanders, for instance, and onward across the valley, could scarcely be surpassed within a range of one hundred miles of New-York. The walk round the lake—about seven miles—may be done any morning before breakfast, and if you want a longer stretch it is quite possible to get on to Hackett's Town, and return by the train. It would be difficult to exhaust the beauties of this neighborhood. I explored it thoroughly for a fortnight, and liked it better the last day than I did the first. There are few spots in which one could spend an entire Summer to greater advantage.

This fact appears to be realised by people who have once visited Budd's Lake; for they come again year after year, so that most of the rooms are engaged long beforehand—although Mr. SHAW, the active manager of the hotel, generally manages to find accommodation for stray visitors. The families which stay here are genial, kindly people—coming more for health, and the health of their children, than for display or tomfoolery of any kind. It is not a good place, as I have said, in which to show off big diamonds, lace, silk dresses, or new cows of any kind. But it is the right kind of place in which to escape heat, dust, and confusion. I hope I may never have to spend a holiday in a less delightful locality than Budd's Lake.

SARATOGA.

The Rascals Comfortable, Exit—More Gossip—Distrait Visitors—A Touching Tale of Fashionable Love-Making.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Wednesday, Aug. 9, 1871.

Saratoga is full, not jammed so that single beds have to do double duty, and double beds become tenement houses in their accommodations, but comfortably full. This is the time for enjoying the peculiar beauties of Saratoga, the hurrying tramp of pleasure-seekers acts like an exhilarating beverage upon the people, and every one seems under bonds to do and act their best. There are no sad faces. Every one is in a gleeful mood; and if, for a moment, that skeleton from home puts forth his ugly hand, a quick glance at the smiling faces around covers up the ghostly shadow, and all goes merrily on. What night have sorrowful thoughts here? Saratoga is made for happy people, and to teach morals or duty in its holiday precincts is as much out of place as would be a camp-meeting under the dome of St. Paul's. There is a time for all things, and truly this is a time for pleasure. This is the common sentiment. It is not that visitors forget their duty, they merely lay it aside for a day.

Are the women of 1871 beautiful in their Saratoga aspect? As an American I would say, Yes. There is a grace in their actions that fascinates one accustomed to the listless attitudes of city life. I remember, last week, one young lady whose walk along the piazza of Congress Hall was a triumphal march, and left a spell upon the busy tongues of gossip that seemed like the touch of a fairy wand. It was the perfection of art. I overheard one young lady saying, "I wonder how she does it. When I was a girl I used to walk along time every day on the tips of my toes, but I don't see that it did any good. Her hair wasn't nice, was it?" O happy world, in which we all find something to ease our anxieties—some compensation. But the young lady was only wise in her generation; she might have walked till doomsday on her toes, and no more have reached the queenly gait of that most admirable walker than could fearns, with its waxen wings, scale the walls of heaven. Our queen was of a different race, a member of that nobility in which there are no mistakes made—the nobility of nature.

Listen to this conversation between two young ladies, standing by the railing of Congress Spring, and holding their glasses:

"Nelly, do you like this stuff?"

"No, I don't; but everybody comes here, and I want to hear and see all that I can. Do you believe I drank two tumblers, yesterday, because Mr. Ketcham was looking at me, and I knew he was thinking I only came here to be seen, as I forced it down?"

"Two glasses; didn't it choke you?"

"Choke me? You just try it, and see. I never want to see him again, any way. Let's go."

And go they did, the pretty little martyrs.

Among the most amusing objects at Saratoga are the quiet, common-place husbands of rich wives, who come here on Saturday and stay over Sunday—men who in counting-rooms are lordly, and fully knowing their business, look and act castly and well; but here, standing beside their showy, richly-dressed better halves, they are sadly out of place. Often you see them wandering through the halls of the hotels, listless and useless, not knowing what to do. Meeting each other, "Brown, what a bore this is!" "Ian't it; I wish I was back home, and was never to see the place again." And yet these are the men who make Saratoga profitable; it is their pocket-books that put our Saratoga landlords into good humor. I met one of these loungers the other day, a man whose name stands high among the old houses of New-York.

"What do you do to live here?" he asked, and I, knowing him better than he knew himself, introduced him to an old ex-member of Congress, who happened to be there, and my friend. Soon the talk went away from this unwholesome present back to the days when both were young and New-York the centre of political attraction—the old days when WEBSTER and CLAY frequented the Metropolis, and found in social and convivial life, freed from the hurry and turmoil of this age, time to know their admirers. Long-forgotten anecdotes were unearthed, and the old gentlemen chirped as they have seldom done. Saratoga took on a new charm for both, and, after a separation made under a pledge of soon meeting again, they both thanked me for their first comfortable hour in Saratoga.

There is a new story afloat here, and unless Joe Miller has noticed it, it seems a fresh incident in human speculation. LUCIE A and GERTIE B, two of the most beautiful girls of the year, fixed their hopes on HENRY D, a grand parti, from New-York. Both girls are stylish, handsome and rich, and the favored swain was only hesitating in the words of the old song,

"How happy could I be with either,
Were t'other dear charmer away."

Both are girls of the period, and to that must be charged the story I am to tell.

One afternoon Miss LUCIE and the young gentleman walked through the park after an extended stroll, during which much love-making went on, and while passing through the halls of the Grand Union the lady suddenly tottered and fell fainting into the arms of her attendant. It was a bold stroke, and victory for a moment seemed fastened there. GERTIE was heard of this, and her fertile mind grew fired with scheming. At last a smile grew upon her face. She owns the nicest pony phaeton in Saratoga, and the next day she invited the gentlemen to ride. He accepted and met his fate. The well-trained horse was quietly going on his way, when suddenly the wheel came off, and the pretty GERTIE lay fainting on the hard road. The terrified HENRY lifted her in his arms and bore her to a convenient farm-house. For two days she refused to recover from the shock. On the third day the remorseful HENRY, who was constantly with her, could stand it no longer. He surrendered; she recovered, and soon there is to be a wedding in high life. Now comes the touch of nature. Miss LUCIE forgot her loss in admiration of the grand coup d'état and has already congratulated her rival upon her brilliant victory.

THE TRAGEDY IN STOCKTON.

A California Woman Shot by a Jealous Wife—Her Ante-Mortem Explanation.

The California papers, received by yesterday's overland mail, give particulars of the shooting of Mrs. JULIA S. LAKE, at Stockton, on the 31st of July, by Mrs. JULIA E. SAVIER, from the effects of which she died on the 2d of August. SAVIER accompanied his wife to prison, but was afterward released, and was with Mrs. LAKE in her dying hours, displaying great affection for her, which she evidently reciprocated. Mrs. STANTON and Miss ANTHONY visited the murderess in jail on the 2d. On the morning of the same day, Mrs. LAKE made the following ante-mortem declaration.

I, JULIA LAKE, being dangerously wounded and believing that I have but a short time to live, do make this as my dying declaration. I was last night in my room, at the Grand Hotel, in the City of Stockton. Some person came to the door and rapped. I got up, opened the door and let in a woman. The woman asked me if I had a match. I said, 'No.' I think I had my head tied up. I said, 'Yes.' She said she would make me sicker. She got up—we were sitting down—and shot at me three times. The first shot hit me in the shoulder, the second in the breast, the third in the thigh. She said, 'There!' and went out. The woman said her name was JULIA SAVIER. I did nothing while the woman was shooting. The paper shown me was on my lap while she was shooting.

The particulars of the shooting and the cause that led to it are thus given by the Stockton Herald:

"On or about the 20th of June, a man named N. J. SAVIER arrived in this city, accompanied by a woman whom he represented to be his wife. They took apartments at the Grand Hotel, where they have since been living together. On the 1:28 train yesterday afternoon, SAVIER'S wife arrived, accompanied by a young man from the Yosemite House. She immediately proceeded to make diligent inquiry regarding Mr. SAVIER—his place of business, where he roomed and with whom, &c. After securing the desired information, Mrs. SAVIER left the Yosemite House, and went to the Grand Hotel. She requested Mr. BARADA to show her to a good room. Mr. BARADA showed her room No. 19, on the second floor. She declined to accept it, and desired a room on the second story. Her request was complied with, and she took room No. 20, which is nearly opposite No. 19. The latter appartment was occupied by SAVIER and his mistress. At about 8½ o'clock last evening Mrs. SAVIER went into No. 19, and there found the mistress of her husband. Mrs. SAVIER drew a Smith & Wesson six-shooter, and fired three shots at the woman, who was engaged in sewing at the time. All of the shots took effect—one in the right shoulder, another through the thigh, and the third nearly in the centre of the abdomen. The latter-named wound was pronounced by all also dangerous. Mrs. SAVIER then left the room, went down-stairs and requested E. L. DOLE to show her the Sheriff's office. Accompanied by Mr. DOLE, she left the hotel; upon reaching the office of the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company, she saw her husband, who is an operator in the employ of the Company, and went up to him, and, catching him by the collar, remarked, 'I have done it at last; I have shot her three times, and I ought to kill you,' at the same time drawing a pistol from her breast. While in the act of cocking it, with her finger upon the trigger, Mr. DOLE wrenched the pistol from her, and thereby probably prevented the summary death of SAVIER. She then compelled her husband to go to jail with her. After the departure of Mrs. SAVIER, the woman rang a bell, which summons was answered by a waiter. She informed him that she was sick and desired to see her husband, but her husband, being on his way to jail, she failed to see him. Reaching a window then close to the room, but did not notice that she was shot, she failing to tell him of the affray, and he knew nothing of it until a few minutes afterward, when he met one of his servants coming down stairs in quest of Dr. LANGDON. The shots fired were heard by parties in the hotel, but no attention was paid to them at the time, it being believed they were fired at the Wigwam for the purpose of attracting attention to the meeting then being held there."

Special telegrams to the San Francisco Chronicle give additional accounts of the parties, as follows:

"During Mrs. LAKE'S last moments she was surrounded by all the ladies of the hotel, who had formed a warm attachment for her, also Dr. LANGDON, District-Attorney BUDD, Judge BROWN, and others. She was asked to receive a minister, and she remarked, 'Oh, pshaw! I don't think so. Oh! I should like to see my children so much.' Mr. SAVIER showed her much attention. She said to me that she often had said that she thought enough of SAVIER to die for him, and now she would at last. After she was shot she remarked to her assailant: 'I believe you have killed me.' The reply was, 'Just what I wanted to do.' Upon the arrival of assistance, she remarked, 'I shall try to live for my children's sake.' The assistant replied, 'Instead of saying to Mrs. LAKE, 'You threatened to kill me.' Her reply was: 'I never did.' So says the attendant of the deceased. She had a letter half written to SAVIER, and it seems by it she intended to go to her husband, Mr. LAKE, in Eureka, Nevada, who had written for her. She evidently at one time was a member of the Episcopal Church, and regularly offered prayers, morning and night. Force of circumstances, probably, had much to do with the unpleasant light she is now in with the public. She was born in Tennessee, and was the only child of a rich planter. Her mother died when she was eleven years old, and her father married a second wife when she was but twelve years. Afterward they lived in St. Louis, Mo., where she married JOSEPH CUDDINGTON, who died from reverse of fortune, combined with dissipation. She had two sons by him, who are now at school in Carson. SAVIER has been frightened away. He left for Sacramento. Public sentiment wavers; people are getting tired of this life-taking under any pretext. Previous to the death, sympathy was with the wife."

Reception Home of the Toronto Lacrosse Players.

The Lacrosse players of the Toronto Club reached home from this City on Tuesday evening, and were met at the wharf by about sixty members of the Club and a large concourse of citizens, to congratulate them. The Leader says:

"The band of the Queen's Own was in attendance, and on the arrival of the boat played 'See the Conquering Heroes Come.' A torchlight procession was formed, and, headed by the band, marched to THOMAS' shoe-house, on King-street, where a splendid supper had been provided for the twelve visitors and the members of the Club. About sixty gentlemen sat down to the table, Mr. OTTER, President of the Club, occupying the chair. After the removal of the cloth, the toasts of the evening, 'The Queen' and 'The Game,' were given and heartily responded to. Mr. HUGHES, Captain of the twelve, gave a description of their reception by the Knickerbocker and Manhattan Clubs, speaking in the highest possible manner of the way in which they had been entertained. In fact everywhere they were received in a most hospitable manner. Mr. MITCHELL gave his impression of the playing on both sides. At the first match, the field on which the game was played was large, and the Toronto men excelled in running, to the admiration of all present. At the second match, the field was smaller, and on account of some remarks which had been passed the play of the twelve was more combined, in which they showed some most scientific play. This gentleman also spoke highly of the manner in which they had been entertained by their 'American cousins.' Mr. OTTER, the President of the Club, said he hoped to be able to shortly bring about a match for the championship of Canada between the Torontos and the present champions, to be played in Toronto. A number of songs followed the toasts and speeches, and a most pleasant evening was brought to a close by the band of the Queen's Own, which was present and performed a selection of music during the supper, playing 'God save the Queen.'"

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

Will He Explain?

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In common with thousands of others, I have been watching with intense interest your exposé of the "greatest robbery on record" by that gang of "forty thieves," known as the Tammany Ring—a robbery which reaches into the tens of millions. I noticed in a recent number of the TIMES a description of the gorgeous refurnishing of the "Metropolitan Hotel," recently leased by the Head Centre of the Ring, WM. M. TWEED, in which your reporter described the fabulous richness of the carpets, &c. I also noticed in another number of the TIMES an account of an interview by your reporter with ROBERT G. GRIGG, carpet dealer, who figures in some of the mammoth bills paid by HALL and CONNOLLY. In this interview Mr. GRIGG acknowledges he had supplied the new Court-house with somewhere between $200,000 and $300,000 worth of carpets, and that he is now supplying carpets for the same new Court-house at the rate of between $20,000 and $30,000 per month! As the new Court-house shows no sign of having such an immense amount of new carpets, the question is, what has become of the carpets, if they have really been purchased? Is it not possible that a portion of this tremendous lot of carpeting has gone toward refurnishing Mr. TWEED'S magnificent Metropolitan Hotel?

Then, again, it is stated that Mr. TWEED was bankrupt before the war, at least in moderate circumstances, and that since then he has not been engaged in any business except that of politics. How, then, has he succeeded in amassing such an immense fortune as he is said to have, ranging in the neighborhood of $15,000,000? Might not his accession to such gigantic wealth in so short a time partly account for the unprecedented increase of the City debt, "in a time of profound peace," in the space of twenty-eight months? Perhaps Mr. TWEED will say it is nobody's business but his own. I will illustrate by a parallel case that it is somebody's business. Suppose a board of bank directors should discover a deficit of a million dollars in its vault—that suspicion should rest on the cashier—that it was a matter of notoriety that he was poor until recently, and that he had suddenly become very wealthy. Have not the Board a right to ask him how he came by so much wealth? Upon the same principle the swindled people of New-York have a right to ask of their servant, Mr. TWEED, where and how he obtained his untold wealth without being engaged in any visible, honest business.

A READER OF THE TIMES.

CLEVELAND, Monday, Aug. 7, 1871.

A Question of Veracity.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

You are doing a patriotic service in exposing the manifest fraud of Messrs. HALL and CONNOLLY'S invitation to the Chamber of Commerce to appoint a committee to investigate the condition of the City finances. It is known by those who have special opportunities for knowing, that it is just now a time of mortal extremity with these gentlemen. Desperate expedients are talked of, and every possible means is to be tried to delay and soften, if they cannot wholly avert, the impending blow of public indignation that the recent revelations of the mal-administration of their offices, have aroused. Investigation is not desired in itself, for this has been persistently resisted throughout all these last years of waste and usurpation. Individuals, press reporters, and committees have repeatedly applied to the Controller to examine or to be furnished with statements of his accounts, and been refused.

This disposition of these custodians of our public funds to prevent such an examination of their affairs was recently tested, in the formal application of the Executive Committee of the Council of Political Reform to the Controller to examine his books. The expressed objects and cautious spirit of this application should have obtained for it a different reception. This justifies its reproduction in the TIMES.

NO. 20, NASSAU-STREET, }
NEW-YORK, April 26, 1871. }

Hon. Richard B. Connolly, Controller, &c.:

SIR: At the last meeting of the New-York City Council of Political Reform, its Executive Committee was directed to request of you an opportunity to examine the records of your department. You are doubtless aware that grave charges have been current for some time against the management of the finances of the City, and that a deep feeling of anxiety pervades the community with regard to its liabilities and financial condition. A mistrust of the hitherto recognized soundness of our City bonds is beginning to be expressed, and that with a form which threatens seriously to compromise their commercial value. It is also commonly asserted by some of the most respectable of our public journals, that large sums of public money are illegally obtained and expended. If these charges and assertions are groundless, it is due to your personal reputation for capacity and integrity, and to the material interests of the City, that the true state of the case should be known. If, on the contrary, they are justified by facts, it is due to the same material interests—in which this body is largely interested, and those for whom it has undertaken to act are far more extensively involved—that such facts should also be given to the community. This investigation is sought by the Council in no partisan or prejudged spirit, and as an earnest of the strict impartiality with which, if permitted by you, its labors will be performed, we are requested to assure you that no one whatever will be made of any of the facts, figures, or information which may be thus elicited until they have been submitted to you and found to be correct. The convenience of your office, with respect to the time and mode of making the examination, will of course be fully consulted. In that view, will you be good enough to name an early day when the Committee may examine the books of your department, allowing in your notice you a brief period, say two or three days, for preparation. Respectfully yours,

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
New-York City Council of Political Reform.

This request was put into the hands of Mr. CONNOLLY by a messenger from the office of Hon. GEO. C. BARRETT, Chairman of the Committee, on the day of its date, and up to this time no response has been made to it. Is there any conceivable reason why there should not have been, on the supposition that there is any willingness on the part of the Controller to have his accounts thoroughly investigated? Does he object to the personnel of this Committee? He is fastidious. Will the Chamber of Commerce be likely to do better? It may, under his manipulation, do better for him and his confederates, but will it be likely to do better for the impotent victims of his malfeasance. It is but a few months since these same men, under a similar pressure, selected from the magnates of the City a Committee of Investigation, and any one KNOWS with what result. Has the Chamber of Commerce better material to put into the proposed Committee than this famous committee of October last, or is it able to surround it with any better securities against corrupting influences? It seems that investigating committees are not special objects of dread with the managers of our City finances, if only those of one's confreres and run them. This is the danger to which we are exposed in this Chamber of Commerce dodge. These money keepers might as well first as last make a clean breast of their business. It has got to come. The people have pronounced the purpose and put their hands to this work. The longer it is delayed the more thorough and detailed the exposure has got to be. Show your whole hand, Messrs. HALL and CONNOLLY. We will then go into a committee of the whole on the contents, and satisfy ourselves very soon and very satisfactorily in regard to our financial situation. OTTENEN.

One Law for Rich and Poor.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I beg to propose that immediate steps be taken by our leading and wealthy tax-payers to raise a fund by voluntary subscription, retain eminent counsel, and bring the City officials who have been charged with stealing the public funds before a Grand Jury (the United States Grand Jury, if possible,) without delay. If a poor vagrant is sent to the Penitentiary for stealing a loaf of bread, why should not rich vagrants be punished in the same way, if they have been guilty of stealing millions from the pockets of the people?

JUSTICE.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Aug. 9, 1871.

The Seventy-First Regiment Armory.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Seeing your just exposé of the rascally bills of several mechanics which have been paid by Hon. Slippery Dick & Co., I want to ask you if there is no glazier connected with the City? In passing Centre Market, I have noticed that almost every pane of glass in the upper portion of the building has had an extra means of letting daylight through in the shape of holes made by stones. There is a sign over the door at the head of the stairs with "Seventy-first Regiment" on it, and as the armories have all been supplied with fine furniture, (judging by the bills,) may not some of it be injured by the elements, if the holes in the windows are not stopped? Friend GARVEY can also find another mine, in plastering up several holes in the ceiling that can be seen with the naked eye from the street. Is the City paying rent for these rooms, whether occupied or not, like FERNANDO WOOD'S Court rooms in Nassau-street?

Rio Wishers are Unwrung.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

While passing through Madison-square Park this morning my attention was attracted to the number of men employed to take a birdbox from one of the trees about to be cut down or transplanted to favor a new pathway. Six able-bodied men were employed to do the business, which was successfully executed in the space of half an hour. A gentleman standing close by, at the time, remarked that it would cost the City not less than $5 to remove the little box, which I considered to be a low estimate. But, allowing for such labor this modest appropriation, an honest statement rendered to the Treasurer of the Department of Parks would read like this:

Labor for removal of bird-box.....$5 00
Original cost.....50
Balance.....$4 50

Other things came to my notice of which I might speak. Let them rest. I am not a tax-payer. G. W. W.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

A Locomotive and Coal Train on the Susquehanna Railroad Thrown Down an Embankment into Forty Feet of Water—The Fireman Drowned and the Engineer Injured.

A serious accident occurred on the Susquehanna Railroad, midway between Central Bridge and Howe's Cave, on Saturday morning last, at 1½ A. M., resulting in the death by drowning of the fireman, SPENCER BLANCHARD, and the wounding of the engineer, JOHN WHIPPLE, together with the loss of about $100,000 to the Company. The particulars of the accident are given by the Schoharie Republican as follows:

The recent heavy rains, together with the tremendous fall of rain on Friday night, swelled the streams and overflowed lands. Drift-wood, fences, great quantities of newly-cut ground &c., came down the stream, and, piling up at the entrance of the culvert, caused the water to rise forty feet from the bottom of the culvert, and within one and a half feet of the road-bed. The distance across the ravine from east to west is nearly 500 feet. The immense body of water contained in the basin had for the obstructed culvert caused a tremendous pressure on the embankment, from which it became saturated with water. When the engine arrived at the embankment, the culvert settled down, and the water rushed through in a torrent. The engine went to the bottom—forty-five feet—and was buried from sight, with its head to the Cobleskill creek. The tender was torn to atoms, the water-tank carried by the force of the water 400 feet from the break. The heavy stones of which the culvert was built were carried down to near the entrance to the Cobleskill and piled up in one huge mass. Twenty-four coal cars, containing about 140 tons of coal, were tossed over into the waters and carried off with the tremendous force of the current. The cars are all a wreck, and some of them were carried into the Cobleskill creek. The engineer, JOHN WHIPPLE, escaped as by a miracle, and to-day he don't know how to account for it. The fireman, SPENCER BLANCHARD, was found on Saturday morning about 10 A. M., at the bottom of the culvert, immersed in water forty-two feet, with his head pointed down stream, and held fast by a rail across his feet. His person was considerably bruised, and entirely destitute of all clothing. Two hundred and fifty men, with the necessary tools, implements and machinery, were at once set to work by Assistant Engineer BEERS, of the Albany office to the scene of the disaster. They worked with a will Saturday and all Saturday night. Sunday the carpenters and others were put on, and on Monday morning trains ran on time.

A Too Willing Juror.

It has generally been supposed that jury service was one of those patriotic duties which all men shrink from. Such is usually the case; but there are brilliant exceptions to that general rule. One of these exceptions is Mr. WILLIAM L. ELY, Secretary of the Guardian Savings Bank, of which the omnivorous WILLIAM M. TWEED is Vice-President. He is also Secretary of the Mercantile Loan and Safe Deposit Vaults Company, of which the talented Mr. VANDERPOEL (partner of Mr. OAKEY HALL) is a director. Mr. W. L. ELY served on the Grand Jury at its last session, and was elected foreman. He was then residing at No. 41 West Ninth-street, in company with his brother-in-law, CHARLES STANLEY DENIKE, who is a clerk in the office of the Commissioner of Jurors, Mr. TAYLOR. He has since removed to Montclair, in New-Jersey. Strange to relate, his experiences in the Grand Jury Room did not prove sufficient, and like Oliver Twist, he demanded more. His name appeared again on that list from which the Commissioner chooses his victims; he was again summoned to serve, and was again elected foreman by his fellow-jurors. He made, indeed, some faint show of resistance, and mentioned to a clerk in the Commissioner's Office that he was residing in New-Jersey. But the clerk responded that he was only a Summer absentee, not a non-resident, and that his going away to another State for a few months would be no hindrance to his serving. As we are all easily persuaded to what we wish, Mr. ELY gracefully yielded the point, and consented to serve. The Mayor, who was in the Grand Jury Room during the whole morning of yesterday, will undoubtedly appreciate the ardor of Mr. WILLIAM L. ELY'S devotion, and will not fail to see it properly rewarded.

The Republican State Convention.

From the Troy Times, Aug. 8.

The Republican State Committee contemplate, as we understand, the postponement of the State Convention until the 20th of September. We fear that this is too late for the work which is to be done. It will be two weeks later than the Convention of last year. The reasons for this postponement are not obvious. There are many cogent ones which seem to render the holding of the Convention as early as practicable very desirable, if the attempt is to be seriously and earnestly made to carry the State, which in some manner so plainly proper that we suppose all Republicans will concur in the resolution that the campaign shall be vigorous and successful. The present attitude of the Democracy invites immediate assault. They are staggering under the blows they have received in New-York. It seems that this would be just the time to follow up the onset. The Republicans ought to carry the State this Fall; they can do it if they are united and well organized. The City and the lower counties did splendidly last year; if our strongholds had done equally well the State would have been rescued then. Every intelligent man in the State knows that the Democracy are far worse off than they were last year. The frankest among them confess it; their leaders survey the future with something like dismay.

Dedication of College Grounds by the Good Samaritans—Large Attendance of Temperance People.

The National Grand Lodge of Good Samaritans, yesterday, dedicated the grounds recently given them by WALTER H. SHUPE, Esq., for the erection of a college and home for indigent girls. The dedication was participated in by junior lodges of the Order and by other temperance societies, to the number of about 2,000, who were conveyed to the grounds by a special train of the Erie Railway. The party arrived at Alturas Station at 11 o'clock, and after walking a short distance reached the dancing pavilion situated on a high eminence, and commanding a view of the surrounding country. The exercises commenced with the installation of the officers of the Grand Lodge, elected on Wednesday last. Past Grand Sire GUINAND, of Brooklyn, conferred the honors upon the newly-elected officers, after which the young people engaged in dancing, the pavilion being in charge of Cascade Division, Sons of Temperance, of Brooklyn. At 1 o'clock, those desirous of taking part in the dedicatory ceremonies were requested to adjourn to the old homestead, in front of which, beneath the branches of an ancient walnut-tree, the assemblage seated themselves. Rev. J. HYATT SMITH delivered the dedicatory address, congratulating the Good Samaritans on the acquisition of the land, and complimenting the donor for his munificence. Speeches were also made by Rev. STEPHEN H. MERRITT, Rev. Dr. FOSTER, of London, Rev. J. L. SWENEY, Mrs. R. E. BARLOW and others. The services closed with prayer and singing, and the excursionists returned to the City at an early hour in the evening, delighted with the day's pleasure.

THE PUBLIC PARKS.

Colossal Extravagance of Hilton's Designs.

If Judge HILTON truly desires to work for the best interests of the tax-payers, let him finish one thing before he begins another. As it is, there are in actual course of construction at the present hour the following fountains in various quarters of the City:

The City Hall Park fountain, midway between the City Hall and the Post-office.

Two fountains in Madison Park, at the northern and southern ends, at equal distances from the band stand.

One fountain in Union-square of large dimensions.

One fountain in Washington-square.

One fountain in the Battery garden.

One fountain at the entrance to the Central Park, on the Fifty-ninth-street block.

One monolithic basin fountain on the esplanade, below the terrace, in the Central Park.

One in the granite terrace leading down from the conservatory to the lake, at Seventy-second-street.

All these will be of granite, some very costly, others less so, but the aggregate will be something tremendous. The estimate for the esplanade monolithic one is $25,000. The City Hall one will be much more expensive. The basin is to be a square of gray granite raised about four feet from the ground. At the centre of each side is a lunette some eighteen inches high of the same material, into which the overflow from the centre will pour through the mouths of dragons. In the middle of the basin rises a pillar of pink granite from Peterhead in Scotland, nine feet in circumference and six feet high. The base and the capital will be of gray granite, with carvings of Syracuse design. This pillar will support a massive goblet of brimming water, cut in dark olive stone, Quincy stone, and thirty feet in circumference. Above this will be another plastered shaft of pink granite supporting a paterd or inverted goblet of olive-green granite fifteen feet in circumference. Above this will be numberless small jets, making a water-shed over the granite dome of the paterd, and falling musically into the huge goblet below. At the corners of each side of the square will be candelabras of bronze with gilt finials. To each will be three lamps. Opposite to each candelabrum will rise a powerful jet curving over into the waters of the main goblet.

The fountain of the Fifty-ninth-street block will be somewhat similar to this, only the shape of the basin will be circular, with a circumference of 210 feet, and eight candelabra will be arranged around the brim. The Union-square fountain will have a circumference of 192 feet, and vases of alternate black and green granite will take the place of the candelabra. In the centre will be a bronze statue, with water jets. The Madison-square fountains will be only 162 feet in circumference, and will also have a bronze central group, with granite flower vases along the rim. The others will be plain granite paterd of smaller dimensions, with the exception of that one planned for the conservatory, about which no definite conclusion has been arrived at.

Though many of these fountains are ready for the stone, it by no means follows that they will be finished for a long time. Granite requires months to cut and polish, and much of that stone required by the plans has to come from Scotland. But, in spite of this, the men were set to work to prepare the basin, to line them with cement, and to build up the external rim. In some cases, this was done before Judge HIL

THE COURT-HOUSE CLOCKS.

Kirkpatrick's Little Bill—Why It Was Not Paid—The Mayor Refuses to Give Any Endorsement to the Times—Sugereall in the Clock Business.

When the admiration felt by Mr. TWEED'S friends rose to such a pitch of ardor that nothing but the presentation of a twenty-carat diamond could adequately express it, Mr. THOMAS KIRKPATRICK, jeweler, corner of Broadway and Duane-street, was the gentleman who furnished the brilliant gem. When the fair daughter of the Boss was united in the bonds of matrimony, and the sentiments of the Ring found a happy vent in massive silver-plate, Mr. THOMAS KIRKPATRICK was the silversmith who provided those glittering stones that excited so much admiring comment from an independent press. When the Aldermen considered golden badges necessary to their official dignity Mr. THOMAS KIRKPATRICK was commissioned to manufacture them. Such being the standing of this jeweler much surprise has been excited among professional circles that his little bill for clocks furnished to the Court-house has never been settled. "Why is this thus?" has repeatedly been asked in Cortlandt-street, the head-quarters of clock manufacturers. Some hinted that the bill had been considered too exorbitant; but these believed that he had charged $18,000 for six clocks, and of this there was no evidence. Others conceived that this view was obviously erroneous, since the more exorbitant the bill was the more acceptable it would be to the Board of Supervisors or whatever officials might have charge of such a matter. Amid all this conjecture, however, there was one plain fact—that Mr. THOMAS KIRKPATRICK had not succeeded in getting his money.

A reporter of the TIMES was sent to ascertain the reason for this apparent injustice to so excellent and honest a tradesman, and one, moreover, so favored by Tammany. He went straight to the Controller's office, and, after some unpleasant vovacing from the County Department to the City Department and back again, had the good fortune to see Mr. SPROUL, the Deputy Controller. He asked that official to permit him to see the clock account of Mr. KIRKPATRICK, and was answered that the bill was unpaid, and, therefore, in the possession of the Controller. He of course was absent. After this rebuff the reporter thought he had better look at the clocks, and see if he could glean anything from them. Every office was decorated with one. They were all handsome in appearance, with dial-plates about twenty inches in diameter, and artistically carved cases about six feet six inches in length. The pendulum was massive, shaped like the feathered end of a broad arrow. There were three others of different and inferior make. The first bore the mark of the United States Clock Company. As their offices are in Cortlandt-street, the reporter thought he had better go there. On his arrival he saw Mr. TERHUNE, who was very polite, but evidently unwilling to give much information. He stated, however, that only part of the clocks had passed through the hands of the Duane-street jeweler, Mr. KIRKPATRICK, and that the remainder had been furnished by himself to the City authorities.

REPORTER—Pray excuse the question, but have you been paid yet?

Mr. TERHUNE—Why, certainly. I was paid in the Spring last year.

REPORTER—Were you indeed? Why was not Mr. KIRKPATRICK paid?

Mr. TERHUNE—I do not know. I think you had better ask him that question.

REPORTER—I stand corrected. May I ask what you charged the City for them?

Mr. TERHUNE—I do not think I ought to answer.

REPORTER—What would you charge me for such a clock?

Mr. TERHUNE (looking up with a smile)—I should charge you $250; the same that I should charge any one else.

REPORTER—Yes, thank you. How many did you furnish to the City?

Mr. TERHUNE—I really cannot answer that question.

REPORTER—How many did you furnish Mr. KIRKPATRICK?

Mr. TERHUNE—Nor that, either. I appreciate your motives, and it pains me to refuse you the information you seek, but you ask me questions which professional feeling obliges me to refuse answering unless I was in a witness-box. If any one brings me there, and obliges me to testify on oath, I should be very willing to tell not only what I might be asked, but also all that I know.

From the United States Clock Company the reporter went over to BENEDICT'S. They knew nothing there about Mr. KIRKPATRICK'S bill. The interior clocks mentioned before had been furnished by a Mr. ROGERS. BENEDICT had furnished nothing, and did not wish to. One of their men had been sent for specially to regulate an old clock in the District-Attorney's office, in the Marine Court Building. He went over three times and fixed it, and then presented the bill, with the order from Mr. GARVIN. He was sent from one department to another for his money, until he got tired of being shuttlecock for so many Irish battledores and refused to go any more, nor has the trifling $5 which was the amount of the bill ever been paid. This gentleman suggested that Mr. BRADLEY, who wound the City Hall clocks, and Trinity, and Dr. TYNG'S, besides other tower-clocks of less fame, might give some useful information.

Mr. BRADLEY, an employe of the American Clock Company, when questioned, could not explain why Mr. KIRKPATRICK'S bill was unpaid, but he could testify to the value of the clocks. They were good articles, and the charge of $250 was not exorbitant. Much less expensive clocks would have done equally well though, and it seemed to him ridiculous to have regulations followed in so indiscriminate way through the Court-house Building.

The reporter next stepped into the great clock manufactories, JONES & Co. The gentleman seen here was aware that Mr. KIRKPATRICK'S bill had not been paid, but could offer no suggestions. The clocks furnished were good, and the sale of charge would afford a very handsome profit.

The reporter went back after this to the Court-house, and succeeded in button-holing Mr. STORMS after considerable delay. He requested to see the account of the City with the United States Clock Company, as that had been paid. Mr. STORMS looked rather foolish, and said he thought none of the clocks had been paid for.

REPORTER—Yes, Sir; I have come here straight from Mr. TERHUNE, who was paid last year.

STORMS—Do you want to see the accounts or the bill?

REPORTER—Either or both will satisfy me.

STORMS—I will see if I can find them if you will wait for a few minutes.

Saying this he dived into the private office, which occupies a central position between the City and county departments of the Controller's office. The reporter waited patiently for five, ten, fifteen minutes, and then rushed back from the City department to the county. Mr. STORMS was there, in close confab with Mr. LYONS, and would not hear the request of the reporter. A sort of janitor, with the shoulder of a prizefighter, and the neck of an ox, glared at him with a sullen eye, and wanted to know his business. "Waiting for Mr. STORMS."

JANITOR—Oh, ah, hum, (very gruffly.) Well, he can't come; he's engaged."

The reporter took no attention to the man, but waited patiently, and he had his reward. Five minutes afterward out came His Honor the Mayor from the private office of the Controller. The reporter immediately made an appeal to Mr. HALL, but that official, in a determined manner, said that he was resolved to furnish the TIMES no information whatever; for he knew that the facts would be twisted to the partisan purposes of the paper. The reporter attempted to quote to him the old song—

"None ever feared
That the truth should be heard,
Save those whom the truth would indict."

But before he had got through the first line the Mayor had turned upon his heel and was striding away, swearing (Mr. HALL is a Quaker) as if he had been practicing the rôles of light comedian and general lover under the tuition of FANNY DAVENPORT, or some other Queen of Comedy.

It was plainly impossible to get the figures down in the Controller's office touching the clocks furnished by the United States Clock Company. No doubt the charge was something terrific, more especially if the explanation of a clock-maker may be accepted as trustworthy. The trade generally believes, though none know anything about it, that Mr. KIRKPATRICK was commissioned by the Tammany folks to furnish all the clocks. As he is only a jeweler, he had to purchase them from a manufacturing house. When he had furnished about six of them, Mr. JAS. H. INGERSOLL conceived the idea of purchasing the rest himself from the United States Clock Company, and thus robbing KIRKPATRICK of his expected profits. The Duane-street man made some fuss about this, and Tammany rebuked his insolence by refusing to pay his bill. What Mr. JAS. H. INGERSOLL charged for his clocks is not exactly known, but it has leaked out that $600 is the lowest sum, and $900 the highest that was charged for a like article. As he furnished thirty-four the aggregate would simply be monstrous. By the way, the fair wholesale price of such clocks is $175.

BRAZIL.

Manners and Customs of the Empire—The Men and Women—The Brazilian Clergy—Welcome to Strangers.

From the Brazil & River Plate Mail.

Among the various classes of which Brazilian society is composed, the nobility naturally claims the first attention. As the creation of a Brazilian aristocracy took place only after the Declaration of Independence in 1822, the length of their pedigrees is but short, and by a very wise and salutary law, all titles conferred on persons become extinct at their death, so that in order that their heirs may attain the same honors, they must render some public service which will merit the appreciation of the Emperor, whose selection in conformity with the public voice seeks and confers honor only on those to whom honor is due." The nobility possess many amiable qualities. They are temperate, generous, charitable, attached to their Sovereign, and courteous to their inferiors in society. Even when occupying the offices of Ministers of State, the affable manner in which they receive both foreigner and native contrasts very agreeably with the assumed dignity and inaccessibility of the English placeman. This is truly a pleasant characteristic of Brazilian officials, from the highest to the lowest; and even the Emperor, at his levees, denies access to none, receives petitions, and listens courteously to any requests or communications made to him by native or foreigner, usually speaking the language of the latter to him. At the office of a Minister of State, the applicant of any degree enters in his turn, is bowed to a chair, and is received as if he were conferring a favor rather than seeking one. If he is a foreigner his native tongue is used in preference; his views are listened to and discussed, and when he takes his leave it is with a feeling that, even if not adopted, they will at least receive a full consideration.

THE FAIR SEX.

The ladies, in their out-door life, usually attire themselves in the latest Paris fashions, and on days of ceremony and celebration, don their jewels of great value and most brilliant luster. At home, however, they in general are seen in very plain apparel, employed industriously in some small domestic economy. Many of the ladies are very attractive in their appearance and in their manners, but, as in all warm climates, their bloom is usually very evanescent, and after twenty-five they are apt to become very stout, a charm, however, which is not without the appreciation of their compatriots. Among them you cannot find the blue-stocking or the strong-minded lady, for in literary pursuits the Brazilian ladies take little interest, but they are the general skillful and devoted musicians of the Italian school.

BRAZILIAN GENTLEMEN.

The Brazilian gentlemen are remarkable for temperance and frugality, and for natural talent may compete with any other nation, but so much enamored of their indolent existence do they yield themselves up to the charms of literature and science, but most of the upper class are content with a monotonous daily round of existence, made up of many naps during the day, gapes over the balconies in the afternoon, and a reunion in the evening, with an occasional visit to the opera. In a birth, the warm and mild climate predisposes to indolence, and the youth, after having passed through the ordinary course of a college education, or having tottered a few years with a private tutor, enters into public offices, or sinking into domestic insignificance, frittera away his life in indolence, or in the endless frivolities of street promenade. In fact, a great want in Brazil is the out-door games, the debating clubs, the cheap concerts, the lectures, the periodicals, and all the various appliances which the European at home has at his command, to strengthen and improve both mind and body, and which would be of incalculable service to the youth of both sexes in this delicious but somewhat enervating climate; and thus it is that the situation of the young Englishmen sent out as clerks to the many English mercantile houses in Brazil becomes most deplorable. Placed by their employers in a house with one or two negroes to attend them, and rigidly shut out from the society of their compatriots, by that snobbishness of English intercourse abroad nowhere greater than in Brazil which makes the tinker of kettles dread contaminating association with the tinker of sauce pans—these, in many cases, gentlemanly young men too often take refuge from the dreary monotony of their existence, and from their feelings of isolation in a foreign land, in all the exuberance of immorality and dissipation.

THE CLERGY.

The clergy, degraded by State patronage, and poorly remunerated by a scanty stipend, do not enjoy a lofty pre-eminence, and are ill able to fulfill their sublime mission. Ecclesiastical preferments are often bestowed on worthless persons as rewards for services rendered not to God, but to Ministers of State, for exertions made, not in the cause of morality and religion, but in canvassing, voted at elections; and thus the great weakness of the Brazilian Church is the thraldom in which it is held by the State, for the true Pope of Brazil is the Minister of the Empire. Still, though the religious feelings of the people have been in a great measure shocked and outraged, the attachment of many to the creed of their forefathers is undeniable. Unfortunately, also, the clergy, having no seminary for their theological education, are generally ignorant, and their only mode of administering religious instruction is by the exhibition of gaudily-dressed saints paraded through the streets, and followed by a blind procession of the priests and religious orders, and by every class of the laity, from the stately Marquis to the humble negro. In the evening the celebration terminates with a display of fire-works, made ridiculous by its adjuncts. Of course such a state of things should leave great room for the efforts of the Protestant clergy, so freely furnished by the societies in England and the United States for the enlightenment of Roman Catholics; but, unfortunately, little benefit has been derived from the exertions of the missionaries, or from the tracts distributed to improve and direct the religious feelings of the Brazilians.

WELCOME TO STRANGERS.

The Brazilians show much courtesy and kindness to strangers who come among them, and it is in the power of any one to make his sojourn comfortably take a great deal of trouble to do them a service. In their intercourse with one another they are very sociable, but somewhat ceremonious. Even among the working classes and the blacks, two acquaintances never meet in the street without an interchange of compliments. The negro, doffing his hat, (if he has one,) addresses his friend with "Salveo Deos," or "Deos te dê bons dias;" then follows a full inquiry into the state of health, and that of family and relations, and on parting the compliments and protestations are regularly renewed. It is also the custom among Brazilians, when speaking to one another, to remove their hats, and to remain uncovered until desired to put them on. In their receptions, whenever a stranger comes in, he is immediately saluted by every one present; and, if seated, they all rise to pay him respect. When he receives a visitor, the master of the house is not too proud to go to the door to meet him, with the most affable expression of "Tenha a bondade d'entrar, a casa é sua," and ushers him into the room, himself following behind. On leaving the room the order is reversed, and the host then precedes his guest. The parting ceremony usually begins at the top of the stairs, and consists ordinarily of an "Adeos," accompanied with a bow; the guest then descends a few steps, followed by the host; here take place a few more complimentary exchanges, and finally, at the door, the guest again turns round and salutes his friend, and a few more bows and polite expressions pass between them. On meetings, however, of more than ordinary interest—such as that of long-absent friends—their mutual sympathy expresses itself in a warm and hearty embrace, lifting them either fairly off the ground—a welcome rather embarrassing to an Englishman when first subjected to it. The salutations of ladies among themselves, both at meeting and parting, are not less ardent and affectionate, and are made on all occasions by a mutual profusion of kisses on both cheeks.

JAPAN.

Reorganization of Prussian Military Organization—The Army of the Prince of Kishu.

A letter from a naval officer on board the Prussian ship Hertha, cruising in the Japanese waters, gives an interesting account of a small army which has been formed in Kishu, one of the zaisai provinces, on the Prussian system.

So quietly has the organization been made that even the Japanese of other provinces know little about it, and the Government at Jeddo has only quite recently informed itself on the character and extent of the force. Knowing what bad soldiers the Japanese make, as a rule, the Lieutenant of the Hertha visited the Prince of Kishu's invitation to inspect his troops as a joke, but on seeing the soldiers he was so well pleased with their excellent training that he took three days' leave in order to observe them closely in their drill and barrack life. It appears that the Prince of Kishu, who is an almost independent Sovereign, on hearing of the marvelous success of the Prussian system and the needle-gun, some years ago conceived a desire to model his own army on the same plan. Negotiated with the Government of Bickeburg for a number of needle-guns, and, having purchased them, asked as a favor that a Prussian officer should be sent over to instruct his men. The terms being liberal, a retired Bickeburg servant was prevailed upon to undertake the task. At his recommendation, compulsory service has been introduced into the province, each man to serve three years. The contingent thus formed comprises eight battalions of 660 men each, 150 cavalry and some battalions of light artillery. The barracks are built on the Prussian plan; food, dress, drill, all is European. Beds, otherwise unknown to the Japanese, have found their way into the sleeping-rooms, and are appreciated; and the soldiers eat beef and wear boots like so many Germans. The uniform is made of cheap material, the color being blue for the privates and black for the officers, while braid decorations denote the wearer's rank. The Sergeant has proved himself a perfect genius, for he has taught the Japanese to make their own uniforms, saddles, bridles, gunpowder, cartridges, &c.—everything, in fact, belonging to the military establishment. He put his small army through all their paces before his countryman, and in every one they gave countless satisfaction. There is also a military school, in which sixty Ensigns are now undergoing instruction in the Prussian system, other provinces being regarded with suspicion, for every neighbor fears that the new army may be directed against himself. The Government at Jeddo, having its attention drawn to the military preparations, has sought to secure the aid soldier's services for its own army, but while there is anything left to reform in Kishu the Prussian Sergeant is a great favorite; but in other provinces he is

PROPOSALS FOR THE WATER LOAN

OF THE

CITY OF PROVIDENCE.

INTEREST

IN GOLD,

AT

FIVE OR SIX PER CENT.,

AS MAY BE DECIDED.

THE CITY OF PROVIDENCE PROPOSES TO ISSUE ITS

BONDS PAYABLE IN GOLD

on the 1st day of July, in the year Nineteen Hundred, (1900) for FOUR MILLIONS OF DOLLARS of, the purpose of defraying the expense of introducing water into said city.

INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

Coupons, payable in Gold, July 1 and Jan. 1, will be attached to the bonds for the interest thereon, or the bonds may be registered, under existing law and the interest payable in gold, on said dates.

AUTHORITY FOR ISSUE.

The bonds are issued under authority given by the General Assembly of Rhode Island, and an ordinance passed by the City Council of Providence.

SECURITY.

Their payment is guaranteed by a lien—first, upon all the real estate or personal property owned by the city, and, secondly, upon all the real estate of the citizens of said city.

The income derived from the use of the water is also pledged to the payment of the bonds and the interest thereon.

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF CITY.

The financial condition of the city on the 1st day of July last, was as follows:

Taxable valuation of real estate $92,815,713 00
Taxable valuation of the personal estate, 1870 ..... 30,866,100 00
Total taxable property $104,090,813 00
Property exempted from taxation, owned by the city, institutions, &c., but held for the Water loan $3,561,062 00
Total value $109,563,675 00

CITY DEBT.

The funded debt of the city is as follows:

1st. A loan to the Hartford, Providence and Fishkill Railroad Company, the Jan. 31, 1876 ..... $150,000 00

To meet this the city holds the same amount of the bonds of said railroad, secured by a first mortgage upon the road in Rhode Island, and also funds in the hands of the Trustees of the Sinking Fund Trust of this loan, amounting to $14,604 07.

2d. A loan issued in 1858 for public improvements of various kinds made prior to that date, payable Sept. 1, 1895, for $60,000 00

To meet this the Trustees of this Sinking Fund have in their hands securities amounting to $26,476 26.

In addition to which there is an annual payment to this fund by the city of $10,000.

3d. A loan issued in 1869 for expenses growing out of the enlistment of soldiers, payment of bounties, &c., payable Jan. 1, 1900, for 250,000 00

To meet this the Trustees of this Sinking Fund have in their hands securities amounting to $20,342 21.

In addition to which there is an annual payment to this fund by the city of $5,000.

4th. The floating debt incurred for public works, such as grading streets, erecting public buildings and introducing the water for which it is proposed to issue these bonds, amounting to 1,540,000 00

Of this sum the Water Commissioners have drawn $1,300,000
There is cash on hand ..... 25,000 —1,325,000 00
Leaving the actual floating debt, say 215,000 00

An examination of the above statements shows that the funded debt of the city is more than provided for, as the several sinking funds with their collaterals, are sufficient, without the additional annual payments from the Treasury, to pay their respective loans at maturity.

The amount of the floating debt above what will be repaid from the sale of the water bonds is so small as to make it safe to say that the City of Providence, with a valuation of $109,562,675, has no debt.

POPULATION.

The population of the city by the census of 1870 was 68,904, and is increasing more rapidly than at any previous period of her history, and there has been expended within the past seven years by the city for permanent public improvements more than $1,000,000.

With the above facts, the Water Loan of the City of Providence may be placed in the first class of securities, and is beyond a question.

CHARACTER OF PROPOSALS.

"The Committee of the City Council of the City of Providence on the City Debt" invite proposals for any portion of four millions of dollars of the Water Loan of said city, to be issued as per the annexed circular. Said proposals to be indorsed "Proposals for Water Loan," and to be transmitted sealed to Benjamin Thum, City Treasurer of Providence, on or before 12 o'clock M., THURSDAY, the 24th day of August, 1871.

The proposals to be in the form hereunto annexed.

Upon opening them the Committee will decide whether the loan shall be a five or six per cent. loan, and unless otherwise arranged, it will be payable at the City Treasurer's office in the City of Providence.

The Committee reserve the right also to reject any or all of the bids at their discretion. The loan will be issued within sixty days from the opening of the proposals, and notice of the acceptance of any proposal thus will be transmitted as soon as the party.

The bonds are partly engraved, and may be issued sooner than the above time if the labor on them can be completed. Interest from the 1st day of July to the date of issue, to be paid by the purchasers in currency at the rate of 1.10 for gold.

FIRST MORTGAGE SINKING FUND Land Grant Bonds

OF THE

ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY RAILROAD COMPANY.

WESTERN DIVISION.

These Bonds can now be had from the undersigned, or through the principal banks and bankers of the United States.

They have thirty (30) years to run, bearing Eight per Cent. (8 per cent.) Interest, payable on the 15th days of August and February in each year. The Principal and Interest are payable in Gold. The Principal in New-York; the Interest in New-York, London and Frankfort-on-Main, free of tax. They are Coupon Bonds, but can be registered or converted into Registered Bonds, and are receivable at par and accrued interest in payment for the Company's land sales. The payment of the principal and interest is secured by a first and only mortgage on the Company's Lands, granted by the United States in 1866, lying on the line of this road, and amounting to 1,500,000 acres, the railway of the Western Division, extending from Marysville, Kansas, to a junction with Union Pacific Road at Fort Kearney, a distance of 170 miles, together with the Equipments appertaining, Franchises, Rights of Way and Personal Property.

The mortgage is made to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of New-York, as Trustee.

The Bondholders are amply protected by the terms of the Mortgage Deed, which prohibits a sale of the Company's lands at less than four ($4) dollars per acre, and a release of the lien of the Mortgage upon any portion sold until the purchase-money is paid to the Trustees, who are authorized to apply the same to the payment of these Bonds, either by purchase or to the Sinking Fund, for their redemption at maturity. This will more than extinguish the debt and leave the railway and equipments free. The security for the payment of these Bonds is therefore beyond all contingency.

The location of the line of the St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad is a commanding one, from the fact that it is a practical extension westwardly of the Hannibal and St. Joseph, the next Land Grant road after the Illinois Central. The St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad is fed at its eastern terminus (St. Joseph) by railway lines coming direct from Hannibal, St. Louis, Chicago, and local roads converging at St. Joseph. Its business is therefore secured. Its connection with the Union Pacific Road opens up the through middle route across the Continent, and is of national importance. This is reflected in the fact that the quantities of letters and telegrams which we have received during the few days the Bonds have been for sale, applying for these securities, indicate the quick response of the American people in support of internal improvements, while at the same time they make a good investment.

Price for the present, 90¢ and accrued interest in currency.

Circulars, maps, pamphlets, documents, &c., furnished upon application.

Expressage relating to the Bonds free. Marketable Securities received in exchange.

We have been at great expense in the examination of this property and the bonds and mortgage, and are satisfied the investments in this Loan will not only be safe but profitable. We base our calculations on the fact that the First Mortgage Bonds of this Company, on the Eastern Division, lately successfully placed by our firm at 97½, have advanced to 103 and accrued interest, making them rule at 10c, or nearly ten per cent. advance.

Under all circumstances, we unhesitatingly recommend them.

The merit of this security and the peculiar advantages possessed by the Registered Bonds in insuring payments of interest, and full PROTECTION against LOSS by FIRE, THEFT, or ROBBERY, will commend them to all careful and judicious investors, and we confidently recommend it as the most desirable investment in the market.

THE QUARANTINE NUISANCE.

Growing Indignation of Merchants and Vessel-Owners.

The Administration of Affairs Strongly Condemned on all Sides—Something About the Health Officer's Income—Serious Charges Against the Powers that Be.

A few days ago the TIMES published an article on the Quarantine abuses of the port of New-York, showing the high-handed outrages committed by the Quarantine officials, how the merchants were mulcted in enormous amounts, frequently more than half the value of their vessels' freights, and also demonstrating the fact that if the present practice of unlimited exactions continues it will have the effect of utterly destroying the commerce of this great commercial centre. The most strenuous efforts have been made by the merchants and shipowners to resist this system of wholesale extortion, but all their protests, all their attempts to shake off the weight that is so oppressive have proved futile, until the majority having become thoroughly disgusted, become inert and indifferent, and finally sit quietly down in their counting-rooms and passively submit to the gross injustice while they see their trade gradually dwindling away to nothing. These exactions are not among the things of the past only, but are of daily occurrence.

THE FATE OF ALL WHO ENTER THE PORT.

Only a day or two a schooner bound from the West Indies to New-London with a load of fruit, thought to shorten the distance by coasting in at Sandy Hook and making the passage up the Sound. Off Sandy Hook she was boarded by a New-York pilot, and it was a matter of not the slightest importance whether the Captain desired a pilot or not, a pilot went aboard, and take him and pay him he must. The vessel had passed both the Upper and Lower Quarantine, and was rapidly making her way up East River when Quarantine steamer Fletcher, already in pursuit of the ill-starred vessel, overhauled her opposite to the Brooklyn Navy-yard, and forced her back to the Lower Quarantine, where she was detained three days for her "insolence," besides paying heavy tribute to the lords of the Health Office at Staten Island. The unfortunate schooner was finally allowed to depart when she had been most unmercifully bled, but no sooner had she arrived at the mouth of the Hell Gate than another pilot boarded her, and again it was volens volens—pay the Captain must, and pay heavily he did. Arriving at New-London, the pilotage and quarantine regulations of that port, though moderate in the extreme, added still another additional burden to the already frightful charges which the little vessel had to sustain, and it is positively asserted on the most reliable authority that after the schooner's cargo was sold the amount realized was hardly more than enough to meet the New-York Quarantine exactions alone. Another instance which has lately occurred will also prove the inordinate greed of the Quarantine officials, who seem bent upon wringing out of their victims every possible dollar that they will submit to pay. The bark Bradley arrived at this port some days ago, with a cargo of sugar from Sagua la Grande, and had a perfectly clean health bill. She was detained in the Lower Quarantine, and all her cargo was bartered by the Quarantine tugs to Quarantine stores at Brooklyn, at a cost of between $800 and $900. This was for lighterage alone, and it is more than likely that after all the leeches had been fed there was very little left of the amount of the freight bills—$2,300—for the owners.

A PORTION OF THE HEALTH OFFICER'S REVENUE.

The amount of the Health Officer's fees for last year, like many of the preceding years, is veiled in the utmost obscurity, yet it is known that his so-called legitimate fees for 1870 reached the respectable figure of $37,487 50. Besides this he received for vaccinating every man, woman and child who entered the harbor, whether they desired the operation performed or not, and for fumigating vessels from all countries, from ports almost in the frigid zone, as well as tropical latitudes, the enormous sum of $21,437 50. It is positively asserted by one HARRY MILLER, who was once in the employ of the authorities, that not less than $5,000 per month is paid by the owners of the store-houses in Brooklyn, to whom all cargoes are taken from vessels lying at Quarantine by the Health Officer's tugs. For removing these cargoes alone is derived an enormous revenue—considerably over $100,000 per annum. The passengers of all vessels detained at the Lower Quarantine are charged $2 apiece to be carried up to the City, and as much more for each piece of baggage, all of which are carried on tugs owned by the State of New-York, and expected to carry both passengers and their baggage free of charge. The mails from the quarantined vessels are always brought up to the City by the State of New-York's steam-boat Andrew Fletcher, for which service Dr. CARNOCHAN charges the steam-ship companies $25 each journey, which, of course, they are compelled to pay or violate their mail contract. There are Captains of vessels who, understanding the modus operandi of the Quarantine better than others, state that a few baskets of champagne and several boxes of cigars which have never paid duty, on being landed at Staten Island, have a wonderful effect upon the duration of a vessel's anchorage at the Quarantine. The emigrant vessels seem to afford the most profitable plunder. An instance occurred recently, when a vessel brought a large number of emigrants to this port. She had five cases of small-pox aboard. These were magnified to twenty cases, and twenty men were taken to the hospital, for whom was charged $60 each, amounting to $1200. This was only for the "trouble" of conveying them to the island, for the Commissioners of Emigration provide for all the expenses incurred while in the hospital. If the emigrant who is transferred to the hospital dies, a charge of $25 is made for his burial, when all expenses are supposed to be defrayed by the Commissioners of Emigration. This comes out of the pockets of the owners of the vessels. Coffee, the most unlikely article to transmit disease or to carry the slightest infected matter, is frequently unloaded at Quarantine and lightered a distance of twelve miles to the aforesaid Brooklyn stores, at a charge of almost half as much as it costs to bring the article from Rio. Never have the cities of Rio de Janeiro, Bahia, Para, and Fernambuco in Brazil been as healthy as this year, yet the Brazilian steamers, all of which have clean bills of health, are invariably quarantined, even their cabin passengers have been detained from two to three days. Upon one of these steamers recently an indignation meeting was held in the cabin, and resolutions were passed strongly condemning the infamous way in which the passengers had been compelled to submit. The injury done by the present system falls heaviest upon the large steamers which arrive daily from all parts of the world. Delays to them are ruinous, as their expenses are over $300 a day, besides the exorbitant charges of the health officials.

THE STEAMER RUSSIA'S EXPERIENCE.

At the time that the Russia entered the port of New-York with Gen. SHERIDAN and Mrs. LINCOLN as passengers from Europe, the steamer failed to notice the doctor's boat, which so exasperated the Health Officer that he detained the Russia in quarantine twenty-four hours for the indignity, and the twenty-four hours quarantine was continued to be enforced on the Russia for several succeeding trips, until the Quarantine officers considered that the erring Captain had been sufficiently punished. The Captain of the Russia says that he would have stopped at once had the Quarantine colors been flying on the Fletcher, but as only the United States ensign could be seen he thought it was one of the Health Officer's usual pleasure trips with a party of friends down the Bay.

The statement was made in the TIMES, a few days ago, that last year the towage, lighterage and stevedoring was exclusively for some time performed by persons in the employ of a few men calling themselves the New-York Harbor Lighterage and Stevedoring Company, for which privilege they paid a very large sum cash down, and a proportionately handsome amount in weekly installments. The parties securing this valuable monopoly had all their plans for taxing the commerce of the City to such an extent as not only to enable them to meet Dr. CARNOCHAN'S merciless demands, but enrich every member of the tug-boat coterie.

If the enjoined documents (copies of the originals) are to be believed, the whole affair was a deeply concocted scheme for the practice of the most outrageous extortion, and a consummate fraud followed to further its ends. The prospectus stated that the Company was organized and chartered under the general laws of the State, when, it is said, the Company never had a legal title to the charter. The capital stock of the new Company was represented as all paid up, the operators in the plot retaining but $50,000.

THE SECRETARY'S STATEMENT.

Subjoined is the statement of Mr. RICHARD B. LOCKE, the Secretary of the so-called Company, concerning the matter:

MR. RICHARD B. LOCKE says that he was one of the New-York Harbor and Lighterage Company; that the certificate of incorporation of said Company calls only for the lighterage business at the docks of New-York, and that the said Company have no duties nor privileges of carrying on any other business except such as is called for in the regular and lawful operation; that said Company has issued stock, and has made a statement of the financial condition of the same, to wit, that they have subscribed and paid in $150,000, which is false in every particular. Lastly, that the Company have not filed the reports and documents, collected and attempted to collect moneys from merchants of this City for which they have no right or legal authority.

The following letter shows how the wires were worked by one MARTIN REINER, the proprietor of a refining saloon on Staten Island, who has a few years ago was almost a poor man, but who is now said to be the owner of personal property valued at a quarter of a million dollars.

May 10, 1870.

The New-York Harbor Lighterage and Stevedoring Company agree to pay Dr. JOHN M. CARNOCHAN the sum of $6,000 per annum, when the agreement is assented to by Dr. J. M. CARNOCHAN for this Company to do the business of quarantine as specified in either of the two papers this day submitted to Dr. J. M. CARNOCHAN for his approval, by order of the Board of Trustees. RICHARD B. LOCKE.

THE CONTRACTS.

The annexed are copies of the original drafts of the two agreements submitted to the Health Officer for his choice and approval:

NEW-YORK, May 10, 1870.

The New-York Harbor Lightering and Stevedoring Company hereby agree to pay Dr. J. M. CARNOCHAN the sum of $15,500 cash down, and $1,250 per week, or at the rate of $5,000 per month for each month that the quarantine shall be in force and this Company shall have the lighterage, stevedoring, coopering, towing and transporting of passengers and baggage from vessels detained at the Lower Quarantine. This contract to remain in full force during the present term of Dr. CARNOCHAN'S administration, provided the Company shall perform the duties above stated to his satisfaction.

By order of the Board.

(Signed.) WM. MURDOCH, President.
GEO. WHITE, Treasurer.
RICHARD B. LOCKE, Secretary.

NEW-YORK, May 10, 1870.

The New-York Harbor Lightering and Stevedoring Company agree to pay Dr. JOHN M. CARNOCHAN the sum of twenty per cent of the net receipts on all business that is done by this Company, arising from the lightering, stevedoring, coopering, towing and transporting of persons and baggage from vessels detained at the Lower Bay of the Quarantine ground. The said twenty per cent. shall be paid to Dr. JOHN M. CARNOCHAN, or to his appointed agent, monthly.

(The latter bears no signatures, as it is said to have been declined.)

Soon after the date of the above-described papers, the following order was issued by Dr. CARNOCHAN:

HEALTH OFFICER'S DEPARTMENT,
QUARANTINE, STATEN ISLAND, June 17, 1870.

RICHARD B. LOCKE is hereby licensed and authorized to go on board of vessels under quarantine in the port of New-York, for the purpose of booking passengers and checking baggage as they are released from Quarantine, subject to such restrictions and regulations as the Health Officer or his deputies may from time to time establish. This license may at any time be revoked by the undersigned.

J. M. CARNOCHAN, Health Officer.

Not long afterward, as above stated, the privilege was withdrawn, and the permission given to other parties.

WHAT THE MERCHANTS THINK.

In conversation with the senior partner of one of the most influential wine importers in this city, the TIMES' attaché was told that Dr. CARNOCHAN'S revenue could not fall far short of $600,000 per annum, and that the only means by which these outrageous proceedings could be suppressed, was by united action on the part of the merchants, and an appeal to the Courts of law. Many, he said, had refused as first to pay the bills of extortion presented, but, unfortunately, they were in the clutches of the cormorant, and the refusal to be bled only rebounded upon them ten-fold in the increased time of the detention of their vessels in Quarantine. A very large West India house on Pearl-street yesterday informed the TIMES that had the firm not had a branch house in Boston they would have long ago lost the great majority of their regular consignments from Cuba, Porto Rico, and other West India Islands, in consequence of New-York Quarantine extortion. They said that Captains of vessels positively refused to enter the port of New-York unless forced to do so by the most urgent necessity, and that nearly all the houses here who had not lost their foreign trade have branch houses either in Boston, Baltimore or Philadelphia, and consent to bear the expense of railway transportation to New-York, where the excess of orders is chiefly destined, rather than allow them to pass through the hands of the Quarantine Health-Officer at Staten Island.

WHAT DR. CARNOCHAN SAYS.

Yesterday evening a representative of the TIMES called upon Health Officer CARNOCHAN, at his residence on Staten Island, in order to elicit an explanation of the charges made against the present Quarantine administration, which it was not doubted that he could easily make. He utterly disclaimed any knowledge of the moneys said to have been paid him as a bonus by the Lighterage Company. He said "the whole thing was bosh." He seemed indisposed to talk upon the subject, and the interview was far from satisfactory.

Action of the Indignant Passengers of the Steamer "South America."

The following are the particulars of the action taken by the abused passengers of the South America:

LOWER QUARANTINE, Saturday, July 22, 1871.

At a meeting of the passengers, held on board the steam-ship South America, from Rio de Janeiro to this port, Gen. T. J. HEADY was called to the chair, and H. AVERY, Jr., Esq., appointed Secretary.

Gen. HEADY explained the object of the meeting to be, to take into consideration the unreasonable and prolonged detention of the ship and passengers at Quarantine. The Chair appointed Messrs. W. CRICHTON, of Baltimore; J. P. ROE, of New-York, and T. A. PRESCOTT, of Trinidad, West Indies, a committee to prepare resolutions indicative of the sense of the meeting.

After a recess of a few minutes the Committee reported the following:

Whereas, The steamer South America arrived at the Lower Quarantine on Wednesday, the 19th inst., at 4 o'clock P. M., having on board forty-seven passengers. She was visited by the Deputy Health Officer at 5 P. M. on the same day, preliminary to usual visit, examined the bills of health from the various ports at which the ship had called on her voyage, all of which were found "clean," with the exception of the port of Para. The representative of the United States Consul (the Consul being absent) declined to issue a "clean bill of health," by reason of reported doubtful cases of sickness in that place. The Master had no direct communication with Para, received only one passenger on board, a native, in good health, and is so at this date. But an interval of fifteen (15) days having elapsed between Para and Rio de Janeiro, is surely sufficient time to develop any disease which might have been conveyed on board, and the fact that not a single case of sickness having appeared on the ship since her departure from Rio on the 25th of June is conclusive evidence of the perfect health of the passengers and crew. The list of passengers and crew were then examined. This being completed, he left the steamer.

The same official visited the ship the next morning, at 9 o'clock, directed the fumigation of the vessel and luggage, which was done. The crew were "paraded for examination," at 10 o'clock, and at 11 o'clock he announced to the master in person to Dr. TIERNEY that a steam-tug would be alongside before 10 o'clock to land the passengers. Again on Friday morning we were visited by an official, who directed the passengers to be prepared to be carried upon deck, as a tug would be presently alongside to convey the passengers to the City. This was done, but we were sadly doomed to disappointment, and to await the further pleasure of the "Health Officer."

Having, without the shadow of a cause, submitted to all this delay, and notwithstanding that not a single passenger nor one of the crew has been sick during the entire voyage, nor any evidence of sickness appearing by the testimony of the Surgeon of the ship and by the examination of the official deputy of the quarantine, the ship is still held in Quarantine, and the passengers are still detained from their families, their business and prosecution of their journeys, and forbidden all intercourse with the world, as if the plague raged on board this vessel.

Desirous as we are, in common with all good citizens, to prevent the introduction of disease into the sea-ports of the country by proper and reasonable enforcement of the Quarantine laws, yet, under the statement set forth, we earnestly protest against that system and its officials which does not discriminate in a proper and equitable manner between vessels infected with contagious diseases and others, like the South America, which are entirely free, and have been during the entire voyage, from sickness and disease of every kind. And further, that necessity which compels a steamer to anchor in the midst of numerous vessels where, as declared by the yellow signal, fever and other contagious diseases are prevalent, is an outrage equaled only by the detested pratique of the Mediterranean, therefore,

Resolved, That our detention on board the steamer South America for a period of three days under the circumstances herein stated, as well as by the absence of the Health Officer during that entire time, is a neglect of his duties and a violation of the rights of passengers, and deserves the condemnation of this meeting, tending, as it must, to bring the port of New-York into unfavorable notice, and compelling passengers to avoid the unjust imposition of her Quarantine laws by seeking other ports.

THOMAS J. HEADY, Chairman.
HARRY AVERY, Jr., Philadelphia, Secretary.
And many other passengers.

Almost a Panic on a Ferry-Boat—The Engineer Asleep.

The engineer of the ferry-boat Arizona fell asleep on the 2 o'clock trip to the Williamsburg side, yesterday morning, and the boat ran into the slip and against the bridge with a jar which caused a panic among the passengers. There were few in number, (mostly morning-paper compositors,) and, being on the forward deck, and taking in the situation at a glance, caught hold of the nearest supports, and thus escaped being thrown down and bruised. When the boat struck, her guards were shoved clear under the bridge and under water. With the exception of a little wetting, all escaped. If the hour had been 11 o'clock instead of 2 the result would have been different. The pilot was on duty, and the engineer, who had been on duty since 10 o'clock the previous evening, admitted that the accident was due to his having fallen asleep at the throttle-valve. He was arrested by Officer REILLY, of the Thirteenth Precinct, and arraigned before Justice DOWLING, at the Tombs Police Court, yesterday, charged with neglect of duty. He was discharged on his own recognizance, to appear when wanted.

THE ITALIAN MOVEMENT.

Grand Convention—The Celebration of Aug. 25—Delegations from Baltimore and Philadelphia—The Colored People—General Invitation.

The following in relation to the coming Italian demonstration will appear in the Italian newspaper, L'Eco d'Italia, to-morrow:

The biennial Convention of the organization denominated the Great Italian Union, G. P. SECCHI DE CASALI, President, will be held in New-York on the 23d, 24th and 25th of August. It will be composed of delegates from all parts of the United States and Canada, and the delegates will take part in the procession in honor of the occupation of Rome as the capital of Italy, on the 25th of August.

The Italian Mutual Benevolent Society of Baltimore, and another with the same title of Philadelphia, have also expressed a determination to send a delegation with flags and regalia to take part in the celebration, and the Philadelphia society will hold a meeting on Sunday to make the necessary arrangements.

So great is the enthusiasm of all classes of Italians in this City in regard to their celebration that even the little children of both sexes in the Italian school in the Sixth Ward have instituted a subscription among themselves to help defray the expenses of the celebration.

Upon the authority of one of the Committee it is stated that the Italians will close up their places of business, and will do no work upon that day. A number of colored men in the City have expressed a desire to join with the Italians in their festival, and a movement is now on foot among them to insure a representation in the procession. The Italian Committee of Arrangements request that an invitation be extended, through the columns of the TIMES, to all societies, civic and military, American and foreign, in this City, who may desire to take part in the celebration. Any communications upon the subject can be addressed to the Italian Committee of Arrangements, care P. PIAMMAGGIORE, No. 407 Broome-street.

Mr. Tweed's Real Estate.

WM. M. TWEED employs three real estate agents in his extensive property transactions. One is GARRISON REAL, Esq., who made extensive purchases for the Ring on the line of the Broadway widening. The other two are Judge BOOTT, who owes his position on the Bench at Jefferson Market to the Tammany nomination, and B. P. FAIRCHILD, who is concerned in the large amount of real estate up-town in which TWEED is so heavily interested.

A word about this up-town property. In Eighty-third and Eighty-fourth streets, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, there are seventeen half-finished houses, and an about Ninety-third-street, between Eighth and Nineth avenues, there are twenty more, making thirty-seven in all. These houses are all vacant, of course, and open to the merciless vicissitudes of the weather. When finished, they will be worth from $14,000 to $18,000 each, or about $650,000 for the entire property. TWEED is heavily interested, through his real estate agents in this property, whose value is of course enhanced by the Morning-side Park project of the Park Commissioners, and the Ring is thus doubly enriched by chances of jobbery in the park work and contracts and by improving property which they have bought in that neighborhood.

A gentleman said to a TIMES reporter, when conversing on this subject the other day, that, as this journal has shown in a few years' time, at the present rate of increase of the public debt, that all of the property in the City will have been mortgaged for its payment. "When finally," said he, "the City is ruined, as it will be, the people will perhaps find that our beautiful Central Park too is put under the hammer to pay for the wasteful extravagance of our corrupt rulers."

Destructive Fire in Norfolk-Street—A Woman Killed by Fright.

Yesterday morning a destructive fire occurred in the buildings Nos. 98 and 100 Norfolk-street. It was owned by JOHN H. SWIFT, and occupied by him as a packing-box manufactory. The fire began in the boiler-room, and owing to the combustible character of the contents, the flames spread with unconstrollable rapidity, and in a short time nothing was left but the blackened walls. The loss was severe, but owing to the reticence of the proprietor the precise facts could not be ascertained. It was found, however, that there was machinery worth about $20,000 in the building, and the loss on this will be about $10,000. The building was worth about $5,000, and the loss on stock is estimated at about $2,000, making the total loss to Mr. SWIFT about $17,000. It is supposed a part of this loss is covered by insurance. JACOB GEBHARDT, manufacturer of sausage, in the basement, lost $1,500.

The fire caused great excitement in the densely-peopled neighborhood in which it occurred, as the workmen employed in the factory were for a time in great jeopardy, and barely escaped with their lives. MARY HATHAWAY, forty-seven years of age, who lived in No. 97 Norfolk-street, immediately opposite the burning building, was thrown into convulsions by fright, and soon died. This serious disaster is reported by Patrolman HAWKEY, who made an investigation in behalf of the Fire-Marshal, as probably due to the carelessness of the engineer, whose custom it has been to leave the fire-room unattended about 7 o'clock every morning to go to his breakfast. He did this yesterday, a few minutes before the fire was discovered. Just before he went out he filled the furnace with the shavings and chips used in the establishment for fuel, and it is supposed that sparks or coals from this communicated to the litter left outside it.

The Eisenhardt Homicide—The Prisoner Discharged.

An inquest was held by Coroner YOUNG yesterday at the Tenth Precinct Station-house in the case of JACOB EISENHARDT, eighteen months old, who was on the previous evening pushed into a closet at No. 41 Chrystie-street by his father, JACOB EISENHARDT, and falling on some broken glass was killed. It was shown by the testimony that the deceased, who was an only child, was in the habit of getting on a wagon to the great danger of his life, and to break him of the habit his father put him in the closet as a punishment, intending to let him remain there only a short time. When the child began crying EISENHARDT opened the door and the child fell backward on a piece of glass, which had penetrated his right thigh and abdomen, severing an artery. He summoned a doctor at once, but death occurred from excessive bleeding before aid could reach the sufferer. A verdict of accidental death was rendered, and EISENHARDT, who had been locked up in the Tenth Precinct Station-house, was discharged from custody.

Blasting Within the City Limits.

Mr. G. D. CARDOZO, Chief of the Ordinance Bureau, has given notice to contractors that hereafter the following sections of the City ordinances in regard to blasting will be strictly enforced:

CHAPTER II.

SECTION 1. In all cases of blasting rocks or stones within the City of New-York, each blast, before firing it, shall be securely covered with six timbers of not less than four inches thick, ten inches wide and ten feet long, each, to be placed over and around each charge, and to be held in place by at least 200 pounds of large stones piled on top of them.

SEC. 2. Three minutes' notice before firing the blasts shall be given by displaying a red flag on a staff, not less than ten feet high, set in a conspicuous place within twenty-five feet of the point where the charge is placed, and also by calling out the words, a "blast," several times repeated, and loud enough to be distinctly heard at a distance of 200 feet from the point of discharge.

SEC. 3. For every violation of either of the preceding sections of this chapter, the offending party, or if the work be done under a contract, the contractor, upon complaint and conviction thereof before a Police Justice, shall be liable to a fine of $25 and stand committed until the same is paid.

The Germans and the City Frauds.

The German-American National Verein, of which Ex-Gov. SALOMON is President, having authorized him by resolution to appoint a committee for the purpose of making an investigation of the City frauds, he has appointed the following gentlemen to act in that matter: Messrs. Radde, Victor Precht, Kiamroth, Zollikoffer, Emil Sauer, Burghard, Dr. Gerke, Conrad Kuhn, Henry Claussen, Jr., and Dr. Ellinger. Two others are yet to be named. It is intended that this Committee shall co-operate with a Committee to be appointed by the citizens generally.

A Man Pronounced Innocent and Sent to State Prison for Ten Years.

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday, JOHN KILLING was found guilty of committing an outrageous assault upon Mrs. ELIZABETH LAWLER, residing in West Twenty-sixth-street. Recorder HACKETT said the prisoner was undoubtedly a bad man, but he believed him to be perfectly innocent of the present offence. He sentenced him to State Prison for ten years.

Our Neglected Streets.

The Street-cleaning Contractor, JOHN L. BROWN, appears to have left the City, for neither he nor his foremen can any where be found. After six hours' search through the City, yesterday, a reporter of the TIMES was only able to find one gang of laborers engaged in the work of street-cleaning, and this consisted of but three men and a boy, for which the City pays half a million of dollars yearly. In many sections the want of sweeping is very severely felt, and the following streets are strongly suggestive of yellow fever and small-pox: Baxter, West, Fulton, Vesey, Washington, the lower part of Sullivan, Orchard, Water, Rivington, Sheriff, Allen, Chrystie, Elizabeth, Oliver, Mulberry, and part of Delancey. In some cases chloride of lime has been scattered in the gutters as a disinfectant.

BASE-BALL.

Mutual vs. Atlantic—Victory for the Former.

The Mutual nine made their first appearance on a local ball-field since their recent disastrous trip to the West, yesterday, in a game with their old-time antagonists, the Atlantics, of Brooklyn, the game being played on the Capitoline Grounds, in the presence of about 250 spectators. The game was a one-sided affair from the beginning to the end, only 1 run being earned in the game, and that by the Mutuals in the second innings, the score, standing 16 to 1 in favor of the Mutuals, several of whom played in good style, especially HIGHAM, who caught all through the game with much judgment and ability. Hon. THOS. R. FISHER, of New-Rochelle, has presented the base-ball clubs of Westchester County with an elegant silver ball, (made by STARR & MARCUS, New-York,) as an emblem of championship of the county. The Confidence Base-ball Club, of New-Rochelle, now holds the ball. All challenges should be addressed to M. J. SULLIVAN, Vice-President of the Junior Association of New-York State.

The Amity and Silver Stars also played a game on the Capitoline Grounds, yesterday, which resulted in favor of the Amitys by a score of 9 to 5.

Death of a Journalist.

We regret to have to announce the death of Capt. WILLIAM F. LYONS, a well-known journalist of this City, and for some years a valued attaché of the Herald. For over twenty-five years Mr. LYONS was a contributor to the New-York Press, filling many important positions, making numerous friends for himself, and earning an enviable reputation as an honest man and conscientious writer, and his death will be sincerely regretted by all who knew him. The Society of the Knights of St. Patrick, of which Mr. LYONS was an Ex-President, met yesterday and adopted resolutions of condolence to the family of their late brother. The New-York Herald Club pursued a similar course, and both bodies will attend the funeral to-morrow at the residence of the family, corner of Seventeenth-street and Fifth-avenue, Brooklyn.

The Great Kingfisher-Longfellow Race.

A large number of sporting-men who gathered at Ford's, on Broadway, last evening, to attend the pool-selling in the much-talked-of race between Mr. HARPER'S Longfellow and AUGUST BELMONT'S Kingfisher, were very much exercised over what appeared to be a well-founded rumor that Kingfisher had backed out of the race. It was authoritatively stated that the rumor is correct, and as a consequence no pools were sold last night. A great many of the sporting men appear to think there is something queer about the transaction. One well-known sport was heard to exclaim, in the tone of a man whose suspicions had been verified, "the murder is out at last." Mr. HARPER has expressed his determination, in case that his horse has "a walk over," to run him, if the day be fine, against Lexington's time. If the race between Longfellow and Kingfisher really proves a fizzle, pools will be sold at FORD'S on Kingfisher's race against Lexington's time.

A Man Bitten by a Rattlesnake in Connecticut.

Mr. DWIGHT BEECHER, a young man about twenty-five years of age, residing in Bristol, Conn., was bitten by a rattlesnake, Sunday, and it is feared may not recover from the effects of the bite. The Hartford Post says that he was getting over a fence and unwittingly placed his hand on the head of the serpent, which lay extended along the top of the rail. In an instant he was struck on the third finger of the right hand by the poisonous fangs. The wounded man placed tobacco and salt on the wound, and hurried to Dr. AUSTIN'S, where the finger was lanced and an endeavor made to extract the poison from the wound by sucking. Whisky in large doses was also administered until the patient became stupefied. The right arm to the elbow was badly swollen and turned purple, and the lips and tongue were somewhat swollen. His recovery is doubtful.

Election of a Delegate to the Central Committee.

ACTON occupied the chair. Mr. JOHN J. TOWNSEND was unanimously elected delegate to the Central Committee.

The Returning Turners.

They were escorted by the local organizations to the point of embarkation, at the foot of Broadway, and heartily cheered as they departed.
